HAND TO HAND BATTLE RAGES FOR BEACHHEAD

Yanks Fight Thru Cassino Streets.

ALLIED HDQ. IN ITALY, Feb. 4 (AP).—American and British veterans fighting side by side within sight of Rome's radio masts tonight were stubbornly holding off four fierce attacks of German infantry and tanks against their two weeks old beachhead less than 20 miles south of the Eternal City.

A dispatch this afternoon from the battle scene said the allied troops "in staunchly defended foxholes" were "holding off the growing storm of the German counter-offensive," aided by heavy artillery support.

Farther south another battle field report said American troops had gained a "good toe hold" on Cassino, anchor of the Germans' southern line, and that American doughboys were in buildings in the town and controled some streets.

Weather Hampers Action.

With bad weather hampering air operations, artillery of both sides was engaged in a ceaseless cannonading and infantry troops were locked in bloody hand to hand fighting as the allied troops checked the heavy counter-offensive of the Germans against the Anzio beachhead.

So confused was the fighting at the beachhead last night and today that 100 British Tommies encircled and captured by the Germans were freed later by another group of British soldiers and their German captors made prisoners by the Tommies.

Allied headquarters announced that the first four smashes by the Nazis had been repulsed with heavy losses and that American troops improved their positions somewhat west of German held Cisterna, the "town of 1,000 pill boxes" on the Appian way 24 miles southeast of Rome.

[The broadcast German war bulletin declared that "major enemy forces" had been encircled within the beachhead and that allied "relief attacks" were repulsed.]

Tanks and Planes Strike.

Droves of tanks, including 60 ton Tigers, led the German thrusts, with Nazi planes frequently sweeping in ahead of them to bomb and strafe the dug-in Americans and British. Both sides were using tanks as attack units and as mobile artillery.

A field dispatch said the battle for Cisterna would "be remembered as one of the bloodiest and most fiercely contested of the whole war."

"For sheer density of dug-in foot troops, this action has no parallel in the whole Italian campaign," the account continued. "A veteran American unit for the first time in this war could expend the full force of its fire power and man power."

On the main 5th army front, 50 miles from the conflict for the bridgehead, Nazi "suicide squads" entrenched in steel and concrete pillboxes inside the shattered town of Cassino still were battling American troops.

American troops fighting thru the hills north of Cassino, seeking to close a trap on the Nazi garrison inside the stronghold, threw back two counter-blows.

British Take Town.

In the Terelle area, five miles northwest of Cassino, the Americans also found the Nazis had been reenforced and were fighting from many strong concrete pillboxes.

There was vigorous patroling on the Adriatic end of the line, and British troops occupied Torricella, southwest of Orsogna and 20 miles inland. The allied line there now runs almost straight from Casoli to Sant' Angelo.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was reported here to have been sent by Hitler to save the situation in Italy.

Despite adverse weather, American Liberators bombed the railroad town of Stimigliano, 25 miles above Rome, while Invaders strafed Nazi transport on all the main and secondary roads from the lower 5th army front to Rome, destroying 41 vehicles and damaging at least 58 more. Four German planes were destroyed and two allied craft were missing.

MURDER STALKS BATTERED YANKS ON BATAAN ROAD

The late Lt. Col. W. E. Dyess, an American officer who was held in a Japanese prison camp in the Philippines, has told in previous articles of the start of the Death March of Bataan in which captured Americans and Filipinos were started toward prison camps. The story of the march continues today. Dyess was killed in an airplane crash in California Dec. 22.

As told to CHARLES LEAVELLE.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

About a mile east of the bombed hospital we encountered a major traffic jam. On either side of the congested road hundreds of Jap soldiers were unloading ammunition and equipment.

Our contingent of 500 American and Filipino prisoners filtered thru, giving the Japs as wide a berth as the limited space permitted. This was to avoid being searched, slugged, or pressed into duty as cargadores [burden carriers].

Thru the swirling dust we could see a long line of trucks, standing bumper to bumper. There were hundreds of them. And every last one was an American make. I saw Fords—which predominated—Chevrolets, GMCs, and others.

Bear Jap Army Insignia.

These were not captured trucks. They bore Jap army insignia and had been landed from the ships of the invasion fleet. It is hard to describe what we felt at seeing these familiar American machines, filled with jeering, snarling Japs. It was a sort of super-sinking feeling. We had become accustomed to having American iron thrown at us by the Japs, but this was a little too much.

Eventually the road became so crowded we were marched into a clearing. Here, for two hours, we had our first taste of the oriental sun treatment, which drains the stamina and weakens the spirit.

The Japs seated us on the scorching ground, exposed to the full glare of the sun. Many of the Americans and Filipinos had no covering to protect their heads. I was beside a small bush, but it cast no shade I could seek refuge in because the sun was almost directly above us. Many of the men around me were ill.

Jap Snatches Flask.

When I thought I could stand the penetrating heat no longer, I was determined to have a sip of the tepid water in my canteen. I had no more than unscrewed the top when the aluminum flask was snatched from my hands. The Jap who had crept up behind me poured the water into a horse's nosebag, then threw away the canteen. He walked on among the prisoners, taking away their water and pouring it into the bag. When he had enough he gave it to his horse.

Whether by accident or design we had been put just across the road

REDS DESTROY TRANSPORTS IN UKRAINE TRAP

110 Miles of Finnish Gulf Coast Won.

LONDON, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Red army closed tighter an iron ring of annihilation around 10 trapped Nazi divisions in the Ukraine today and destroyed 84 big Junker transport planes from the fleet the Germans apparently were using to fly out troops.

In the north, Moscow announced, soviet troops completely cleared the 110 mile coast of the Gulf of Finland from Leningrad west to the Narva river mouth inside Estonia. Other forces wiped out the last Germans on the railway from Leningrad to Novgorod, the second north-south line freed since the battle of the north began.

The Germans trapped in the Dnieper bend, numbering probably more than 100,000, were being wiped out as the Red army closed the encircling ring—now about 40 miles in diameter—and captured seven more towns, said the Moscow war bulletin, recorded by the soviet monitor. Fifty-eight Nazi tanks were destroyed and 2,800 Germans killed in fighting in this area.

Down 24 Big Planes.

"Our troops continued to wage engagements for the annihilation of encircled enemy groups," the bulletin said. Moscow dispatches added that the Germans were being sealed into small units and then being captured or wiped out.

The announcement told of bringing down 24 Junkers-52 transports in the air and the destruction of 60 more of the tri-engined Nazi planes on landing grounds.

Use of these planes indicated the battle was in its last stage, for in a similar predicament at Stalingrad a year ago the Nazis attempted to supply and then evacuate important army men with transport aircraft. The Russians did not say whether the Nazis were using them to send in reenforcements or evacuate beleaguered troops.

The Russians meanwhile were moving steadily in on the ground, capturing the town of Voronovka, 13 miles north of Shpola; Moshni, 15 miles northwest of Cherkasi, and Mikahilovka, 9 miles south of Kanev.

Advance Along Lake.

In the north the Russians not only cleared the Gulf of Finland to a point 10 miles past the Estonian border, but to the south were advancing along the eastern banks of Lake Peipus, capturing several towns and hamlets, the bulletin said. The westward drive had bypassed the gateway town of Narva.

Other forces of Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad front pushed to within 20 miles of Luga down the Leningrad-Luga-Pskov railway.

Still farther east troops of Gen. Kyrill A. Meretskov's Volkhov front, moving west from the completely cleared Leningrad-Moscow railway, pushed the Germans from their last foothold on the Leningrad-Novogorod line, giving the Russians complete control of two major north-south routes. Another 2,700 Nazis were reported killed in these battles.

Tell of Vitebsk Battle.

German broadcasts, meanwhile, issued pessimistic reports indicating that a Russian attack, which they reported yesterday upon the White Russian stronghold of Vitebsk, was growing in intensity. The Germans hinted that Vitebsk might soon be yielded. They said 10 Russian divisions were being hurled into the assault northeast of the town alone.

Moscow still was silent on the German admission of withdrawal from Luck, 85 miles inside pre-war Poland on the central front, but dispatches from Moscow said there were indications that Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's offensive on this salient was active again.

FRANKFURT BLASTED ANEW BY BIG YANKEE ARMADA OF BOMBERS

LONDON, Feb. 4 (AP).—Making their sixth major attack in seven days, a powerful armada of American heavy bombers attacked the German industrial and communications center of Frankfurt and other targets in western Germany today in operations from which 21 bombers and one fighter failed to return.

Gunners on the bombers shot down four German planes while the escorting fighters accounted for eight more.

While only weak German fighter opposition was encountered, returning crews reported the Nazis sent up a heavy curtain of anti-aircraft fire over the area.

Among the raiders was Maj. James Stewart, former film star, who led a Liberator squadron on his sixth mission.

The attack marked the third time American planes have cascaded bombs on the city. On Jan. 29 it was hit with a record 1,800 tons of bombs by a record number of well over 800 bombers. In a gigantic air battle over the city 102 enemy planes were shot down against a loss of 21 attacking bombers and 13 fighters.

During the night two waves of heavy British bombers crossed Dover strait for another continental attack. The last big R. A. F. night mission was the Jan. 30 raid on Berlin.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., KICKS OVER TAX LOSSES TO U. S.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—A complaint against local tax losses from federal and state acquisition of property in Hyde Park, N. Y., the home town of President Roosevelt, was voiced today by Elmer Van Wagner, town supervisor.

Property with assessed valuation of $473,000 has been removed from Hyde Park's total assessment rolls of $3,300,000, Van Wagner testified at a hearing conducted here by the congressional committee on public lands. He listed the tax exempt property as including the Franklin D. Roosevelt library, with an assessed value of $420,000; the estate of Col. Edmund Rogers, assessed at $138,000, and the Ogden Mills and Vanderbilt estates, converted into state parks.

Questioning Van Wagner about the Roosevelt library and the President's estate, Rep. Chenoweth [R., Colo.] drew laughter from the spectators when he commented:

"It was my understanding he was going to move back there next January."

U. S. Jap Asks to Visit Tokio —in a Liberator

San Francisco, Feb. 4 [Special].—Sgt. Ben Kuroki, a Nebraska farm boy of Japanese ancestry, who twice won the distinguished flying cross for bombing exploits in the European theater, told an applauding audience today that when he visited Tokio it would be "in a Liberator bomber."

This is the type of ship in which Kuroki, known to fellow crew members as "Most Honorable Son," helped blast the Rumanian oil fields, Rommel's North African communication lines, and Italian cities in 30 bombing missions.

Talking with war department permission before the Commonwealth club, the sergeant declared he would rather go thru all of his bombing missions again than face the kind of prejudice he faced during his early months in the army. He said he had had "two battles to fight—against the axis and against intolerance."

Won Friends in Army.

"In my own case," he went on, "I have almost won the battle against intolerance; I have many close friends in the army now—my best friends, as I am theirs—where two years ago I had none.

Kuroki voiced the belief that "loyal Americans of Japanese descent are entitled to the democratic rights which Jefferson propounded, Washington fought for, and Lincoln died for."

"Under fire, a man's ancestry, what he did before the war, or even his present rank, don't matter at all," he said. "You're fighting as a team—that's the only way a bomber crew can fight—you're fighting for each other's lives and for your country, and whether you realize it at the time or not, you're living and proving democracy."

Bomber was a "Melting Pot."

Kuroki, who is 21 years old and has a younger brother in the army air forces, was for a time a tail gunner and later top turret gunner on a Liberator. In the same crew, he said, was a Jew, a German, and an Irishman. Later he flew with a pilot who was a full-blooded American Indian and with a Polish gunner.

"What difference did it make?" he asked. "We had a job to do. And we did it with a kind of comradeship that was the finest thing in the world."

Kuroki is resting at a southern California base and awaiting what he hopes will be an assignment to the Pacific. A radio speech he was to make recently was canceled because, a radio spokesman said, "the whole American-Japanese question is too controversial."

ALLIES DESTROY 80 MORE JAP PLANES IN BIGGEST WEWAK RAID

ALLIED HDQ. IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC Feb. 5 [Saturday]—(AP).—Eighty Japanese planes have been destroyed by allied airmen in a raid on the Japanese base at Wewak, New Guinea, Gen. MacArthur announced today. Seventy-two enemy planes were caught grounded and destroyed. Eight were shot down.

Wewak is the major air and supply base for Japan's defenses in northeastern New Guinea.

In the latest raid, 200 tons of bombs were poured into the Wewak defenses in the heaviest blow at that reenforced base.

On the ground, Australian forces driving toward Madang, southeast of Wewak, have advanced along the coast and up the Ramu valley.

The Ramu valley forces on the right flank are within 18 miles of Bogadjim, the defense outpost for Madang 20 miles to the north. The left flank force, in the upper Boku river valley, has occupied Mataloi, 16 miles from Bogadjim.

On the coast, Australians moving above Sio have advanced six miles to Memau, within 24 miles of American positions at Saidor, 50 miles southeast of Madang.

On Bougainville, in the northern Solomons, American patrols have advanced almost all the way across the island to the Jap held eastern coast.

CHICAGO TO LOSE 'HOME RULE' OF RATION CONTROL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—Chicago will be deprived of its "home rule" over rationing and price control under a plan to merge the Chicago district OPA office with the regional headquarters, it was learned exclusively tonight.

Chester Bowles, OPA administrator, is expected to announce shortly the closing of the Chicago district office and the transfer of its staff and operations to the regional office headed by Rae E. Walters, newly named regional administrator. Walters is an Iowa farmer who is an intimate of Jake More, Iowa state Democratic chairman.

The merger will follow similar actions in New York and Boston. It was described in OPA as an effort to concentrate control in hand picked regional administrators who can be made responsive to direction from Washington. The consolidation will be explained officially as an economy measure, altho actually no savings will result, it was learned.

20,000 Strike Over New Deal Favor of CIO

Vote Foundry Strike

Chicago's 50 foundries producing gray forge iron face a shutdown at midnight tomorrow as the result of a strike vote taken last night by the Molders and Foundry Workers [AFL]. Union officials said the strike vote was unanimous and that 5,000 men are affected.

Chester Sample, international vice president of the union, said the strike is the first in the middle west to be authorized by an international union under the provisions of the Smith-Connally act.

The strike vote followed refusal by the regional war labor board to approve a wage agreement submitted by local 233 of the union and the Chicago Foundrymen's association, calling for a 6 cent an hour increase for all workers. Present pay scales run from 74 cents an hour for common laborers to $1.22 for journeymen.

The board refused to approve the pact on the ground that the foundry workers had received wage increases of 25.6 per cent since Jan. 1, 1941.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 4 [Special].—More than 20,000 skilled workmen in Michigan and Ohio war plants went on strike today in a general walkout which their leader termed a fight against the Roosevelt administration's support of the CIO "and the consequent almost prohibition of independent unionism."

Matthew Smith, national secretary of the striking union—the Mechanics' Educational Society of America—said he expected others among the independent union's 53,000 members to follow the thousands who left their jobs. A spread of the walkout would affect 40 plants in Detroit alone, he said.

Smith telegraphed heads of 67 factories with which the MESA has contracts, explaining the reason for the strike and giving assurance the union has no dispute with them.

Termed Fight for Survival.

"Our union is involved in a very crucial difficulty with United States government agencies regarding independent unions," he told them. "To us it is a fight for our organization's right to survive in the face of the administration's support of the CIO, and the consequent almost prohibition of independent unionism by the national labor relations board and the war labor board.

"These difficulties may result in a stoppage of work by our members in your plant and this message is to assure you that we have no dispute with your management and fervently hope the disruption will not be forced upon your company by the maladministration of labor laws in Washington."

MESA membership being comprised of tool and die experts, a work stoppage by a comparatively small number of these key men would soon affect production.

Objects to NLRB Hearing.

The basis for the walkout was the MESA's objection to an NLRB hearing at Toledo, scheduled for today, on the question of representation of employes in the toolroom of the Willys-Overland Motor company.

Asserting that their union already is the bargaining agent for the department, MESA representatives refused to participate in a NLRB hearing on a petition of the United Automobile Workers-CIO for a bargaining election.

The walkout began shortly before noon in the Willys-Overland plant and quickly spread to other Toledo factories and then to other cities. Work stoppages soon had involved 10,000 workers in Cleveland, O., more than 6,000 in Detroit, and ap-

FORM ANTI-4TH TERM LEAGUE OF DEMOCRATS

Men from 20 States Join Movement.

BY THOMAS MORROW.

The American Democratic national committee, a group of anti-fourth term Democrats representing 20 states, was formed yesterday in Hotel Sherman and pledged to take the party from the Roosevelt palace guards and return it to the people of the United States.

Formation of the committee was preceded by an address by Harry H. Woodring, former secretary of war under President Roosevelt, before the Executives' club in the Sherman warning that the Democratic party must rid itself of misguided so-called intellectuals who believe democracy has failed and that America must be made over.

Woodring, a Kansan, was named chairman of the committee, and Robert E. O'Brian of Des Moines, former Iowa secretary of state, was chosen secretary and treasurer. National headquarters will be opened today in the Stevens hotel. Jeffersonians of each state were asked to name two members of the committee.

Propose National Convention.

Plans were made to call a national convention by June 1 either in St. Louis, Mo., or Louisville, Ky. The committee at a later meeting is to decide the time and place of the convention. A statement of principles said each state would be entitled to "the representation enjoyed prior to 1933" and the two-thirds rule for nomination of candidates would be recommended to safeguard against future attempts to subvert and destroy the Democratic party.

Organizers held in their statement the step was necessary because the New Deal had failed to preserve the rights of minorities, to prevent one branch of the government from usurping the powers of another, to maintain a government of laws instead of men, and to preserve the states as bulwarks against anti-republican principles.

"The present administration," said the declaration of principle, "has surrounded itself with alien-minded advisers, who are destroying the American form of government, substituting a system of burocratic control over the lives and affairs of our citizens, and has injected the doctrine of the indispensable man.

Liberties Destroyed at Home.

"We, the followers of Thomas Jefferson, will no longer stand idle while men, falsely calling themselves Democrats, destroy on the home front the very liberties for which our sons are fighting overseas. We invoke the ancient common law Writ of Right for the recovery of our birthright."

Many of the delegates dissented from the praise of Roosevelt contained in the Woodring speech. One of them was James A. Reed, long a senator and Democratic leader of Missouri.

"I am for calling a convention," said Reed before the committee was formed, "returning the powers of congress and repudiating the attacks upon it. I don't agree that a man who has sworn to support and defend the constitution and then tried to destroy it should ever have any confidence placed in him again."

Condemns Creator of Guard.

Marshall Wingfield of Memphis, Tenn., commander in chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, held it impossible to condemn the palace guard and approve the man responsible for it. He said he believed the anti-fourth term Democrats should convene in April and name true candidates for the Democratic party.

James E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture of Texas, held that the new organization should halt the drift toward communism and throw off the influence of the "Hopkins bunch."

"I want to see a President who will not try to dominate," said McDonald. "I'd like to see both parties get together and nominate a great American, not a politician. This would leave the palace guard

Lee Meriwether of St. Louis, president of the Jeffersonian Democrats, asserted that there is a spirit of revolt among the people, awaiting for a leader to harness it.

"The New Deal is drunk with power," said Samuel B. Pettingill, former congressman from Indiana. "Today it is hard to distinguish the New Deal from national socialism in Germany and the fascism of Italy."

The movement, which the founders hope to make nation-wide before their convention time, had one or more representatives from each of 20 states yesterday. States represented were Illinois, Indiana Missouri, New Mexico, Texas, Massachusetts, Kansas, New York, Ohio, Iowa, Minnesota, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Louisiana, Nebraska, Virginia, and North Dakota.

URGES NOMINATING HULL

Harry H. Woodring, secretary of war in the Roosevelt cabinet from 1936 to 1940, yesterday voiced a blistering warning that the Democratic party must rid itself of misguided so-called intellectuals who believe democracy has failed and that America must be made over.

Woodring lashed at what he termed the spectacle of a scheming, wire pulling Rasputin sitting on the Supreme court of the United States. He warned that the country will not tolerate a post-war Hopkinized world-wide WPA at the expense of the American taxpayer.

His solution for the Democrats was the candidacy for president of Cordell Hull, secretary of state. He mentioned as other possible candidates Sen. Byrd [Va.], James A. Farley, Sen. George [Ga.], Gov. Jones of Louisiana, and Sen. O'Daniel [Tex.].

Denounces Fellow Travelers.

The speech was a denunciation of the "mavericks, fellow travelers and European minded ideologists" now making up the palace guard of the Roosevelt administration, and it was a warning to the Democratic party that all recent election returns point to a crushing defeat in November.

In his references to the President himself, Woodring was friendly. He paid tribute to Mr. Roosevelt for the social and economic gains achieved in his regime, and said the nation would never repudiate them.

In addition, Woodring praised the President for his handling of foreign affairs and recommended that Roosevelt be appointed to sit at the head of the American delegation to the peace conference. But he emphasized his belief that the nation wants a strongly pro-American policy of world collaboration at the peace table.

Burdened with Vicious Tyranny.

"Jefferson, Madison, and their colleagues knew the bitterness of tyranny and they also knew how to strike off the shackles of freedom and liberty!" Woodring asserted.

"Today Americans are sorely burdened with fear, restraints, and laws of overlords; a tyranny just as vicious, just as deadly in its withering effect upon their freedom, their liberty, as was ever suffered by the colonists.

"I refer to none of the sacrifices and denials of material things needed in the war effort which all of us willingly and wholeheartedly approve and respect. I refer to those sinister plans, regimentation and ideologies of a group of idealistic, misguided, impractical, socially-minded, so-called intellectuals—the palace guard!

Same Ideologies as Foes'.

"To that group that believes our American democracy has failed, that believes America needs making over. The thinker-uppers of social and economic ideas and schemes so widely propagated as ideals, which are, in fact, the very doctrines from which foreign tyrannies have sprung. The very ideologies we now are at war to destroy!

"I refer to this palace guard that has wormed themselves into and usurped a leadership in our federal administration that has become a menace to our individual rights and a threat to the very existence and maintenance of our traditional constitutional form of government; that has become a challenge to our freedom, our Bill of Rights—that God given heritage written in the blood of Americans of 1776.

"Rasputin on Supreme Court."

"I refer to the revolting spectacle of a politically scheming, conniving, wire pulling Rasputin sitting on the Supreme court of the United States, fouling the nest of this worthy institution as he whispers his directions to his fellow travelers in a plan to make America over under a pattern inherited from European ideology.

"Today, there has grown up in America a fear, a resentment against this group expressed in a revolt at the polls. A resentment that is being expressed against the Democratic party. A revolt that has brought defeat after defeat since 1940.

"A revolt of fear against the program of these impractical men who have been brewing a poisonous cauldron of European ideologies of government and needling its venom into the veins of democracy. A fear that these mavericks, under cover, would lead our country into a new order, embracing a planned program designed toward state controled capitalism, with plans in their new found powers and influence for the destruction of the American system of free enterprise.

Leaches on Private Enterprise.

"People believe they propose to spend and spend that they may tax and tax private enterprise until it is bankrupt; until there is no longer profit sufficient for an incentive to stay in business and pay out most of the income to wasters, idlers, leaches, inspectors, and snoopers; until there is no longer incentive to carry on with worry and fight against reports upon reports, harassment upon harassment.

"The revolt is against a horde of officious, arrogant government administrators, bureau chiefs, and thousands of agency and commission heads; against representatives and office holders in the field, hundreds of thousands of federal employes in Washington and thruout the 48 states.

"Against these chamberlains of the palace that believe in a theory that makes the state supreme, that the individual citizen should be subservient to the state—rather than the American idea that the government is merely the instrumentality of the people and is the servant thereof.

Voters Blame Democrats.

"The revolt of the voters in recent elections is based upon the belief that this palace guard, its ideas of government, its schemes and plans for a state controled capitalism are all synonymous with the Democratic party. The people—the voters, therefore, in order to defeat this sinister group, today are, in every chance they get, voting defeat to all candidates of the Democratic party."

Woodring then listed reforms set up by the Roosevelt administration and asserted that the recent revolt at the polls is not against the fundamental principals of the Democratic party, but against policies, administration, and personalities.

"While acknowledging these Roosevelt gains and reforms," he continued, "the people are pausing at the election booths as they realize that thruout this decade of humanitarianism there has run a creeping sickness of maladministration and misuse of these reforms.

Fear Destruction of Democracy.

"They pause and then revolt with fear that the delegated powers of the chief executive have been sublet into deceptive and sinister hands. A sickness and malady they fear is so malignant that it tends not only to lose the splendid Roosevelt gains but thru its poison to destroy democracy itself.

"The voters are consumed with fear that this group of crackpot ideas is responsible for this cancerous growth upon the body politic as they protest a multitude of grievances that harass their people and eat out their substance. Protest as they are harassed in their every day life by many needless restraints and denials unwarranted as necessary by our war effort.

"Persecuted with regulations and reports innumerable; with tangled, ambiguous income tax report blanks, preyed upon by countless checkers and snoopers with Gestapo arrogance. Revolt at the sniping and disparaging attitude toward the very backbone of our country—the farmers and the Main streets of America.

Commissions in Triple Rôles.

"Protest as they have been victims of edicts and orders of burocrats and commissions that have assumed the rôle of prosecutor, jury and judge of self-made laws. Protest the waste and extravagance of federal agencies charged to them as taxpayers.

"Fear, confusion and distrust stalk the land as the people enter the voting booths to indict the Democratic party. Indict, because they fear a vote for the Democratic party will be interpreted as a mandate to continue the influence and power of this group of fellow travelers. Indict, because they fear this group plans to destroy the American system of private enterprise and set up in its place a state controled capitalistic order.

"One that would, thru its purse strings, direct, regulate and regiment the complete economy of this nation. That would under a planned economy and state controled capitalism, use the taxpayers' money that flows into the United States treasury to subsidize, to loan, to grant and give away sufficient money to virtually hold a mortgage upon the vote of every beneficiary of such a paternalistic government.

Multitude of Grievances.

"These are the multitude of grievances charged up to the Democratic party and which the people protest, revolt, and vote against."

Woodring said all Americans are for winning the war and that is not an issue in the forthcoming national election. He pointed out, however, that the election will determine the domestic policies of the United States until 1949, and perhaps for years thereafter.

"Therefore," he continued, "it is imperative that this campaign produce a full discussion and frank expression on all issues; on both domestic and foreign policies and all problems that confront this nation. Too, it is the duty of every loyal American to point with shame to any person or persons who would abridge the inalienable right of free discussion and constructive criticism of either the domestic or foreign policy—and charge that abridgment to the war.

No Rights Abridged by War.

"War gives no license or right to abridge even one of the freedoms of the American Bill of Rights. It is the obligation of those Americans who believe in all 'freedoms' to fight on the home front for the principles they believe in as vigorously as they likewise support and fight for their country's interests in foreign fields.

"Listen, Democrats! As we enter this campaign with the people tired, confused, and resentful against us, with revolt at the polls, there is only one thing that can save us—unity! Unity of all Democrats! A reunited Democratic party under the leadership of 1932."

By this reference to 1932 leadership, Woodring explained he meant James A. Farley, campaign manager for the party in that year. Then the speaker put forth his proposal that the present administration leaders and their followers should join with "the millions of us Democrats who favor a return to the united Democratic party basis of 1932" and present to the nation as the nominee for President Secretary Cordell Hull.

Approved by Loyal Democrats.

"The candidacy of Secretary Hull would have the approval of every loyal Democrat in America," Woodring asserted. "And if real, loyal Americans, patriots, regardless of victory for some political party, seek haven in troublous times on both the foreign and domestic fronts, then, there stands that stalwart oak of Tennessee — Cordell Hull.

"A soldier, a statesman, a sage whose age adds wisdom and experience to his value as President of the United States during the next four momentous years. With Sen. Wheeler, James A. Farley, Gov. McNutt [former Gov. Paul McNutt of Indiana], or Sen. Gillette as his running mate, constitutional government—America—is secure.

Would Win Voters' Confidence.

"The candidacy of Cordell Hull would restore confidence to the voters and meet with support from every section of the land. It would regain the confidence and support of the entire citizenry, and particularly the voters of those two great agricultural sections of the nation—the south and the west!

"Restore confidence that agriculture, that great basic wealth of the nation, would be able to manufacture its own products at home—in local fields. Permit local manufacture, economically justified, by a revision of freight rates in the south and west. For the south and west today demand an equality of opportunity in freight rates, thru equality in costs of transportation of their products.

"Secretary Hull's candidacy would dispel the growing apprehension that the program of the Democratic party, influenced by the palace guard, plans the change of our existing American order and the extinction of free enterprise. It would radiate assurance that he would use his position of high responsibility in all seasons and at all times in reducing taxes, of increasing efficiency of government, of cutting out the underbrush around our governmental structure, or getting the most public service for every dollar paid in taxation. His would be a sacred covenant with the taxpayers—the voters of America!"

Cites Recent Defeats.

Woodring referred to the Democratic party's recent defeats in New York, New Jersey, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania, and the losses of congressional seats in two districts of Kentucky and Missouri that never before had been lost by the Democratic party.

"What is this revolt?" Woodring asked. "What is this defeat upon defeat? Is it not a warning to Democrats—to those in control of the party machinery and administration—that something is wrong? What, if not a signal of disapproval of the sinister influence and power of the palace guard? Fear! Revolt! Defeat, justified or unjustified, is a signal to analyze the cause.

"We Democrats have many other outstanding leaders. Our party is not restricted in its choice of a Presidential candidate to one man. A roll call would present in addition to Cordell Hull such illustrious names as Harry F. Byrd, James A. Farley, and the impurged George of Georgia.

"An organization of loyal Democrats woven into a cohesive, emphatic, and determined bloc may approach the coming campaign with a true spirit of coöperation. A spirit of give and take. But such a bloc may also be equally effective, and perhaps the balance of power if necessary. An organized bloc can be equally effective in joining any movement that has for its purpose the repudiation of the palace guard and its philosophy of government."

SHIFT IN CITY JUDGES WILL BE EFFECTIVE FEB. 7

Judge John Gutknecht will take over auto license court, in addition to sitting in Speeders court, replacing Judge Cecil C. Smith who will preside over Safety court. Judge William V. Daly, formerly in Safety court, will go to the South Chicago and Grand Crossing police courts. Judge Edward P. Luczak, formerly in these courts, will conduct hearings on small claims in the city hall.

Judge Charles S. Dougherty also will hear small claim cases in the city hall, replacing Judge Samuel Heller, who will go to the West side police courts. Judge Oscar S. Caplan will succeed Judge Justin F. McCarthy in another small claims court in the city hall. Judge McCarthy and Judge Francis Borrelli are on vacation.

COURTNEY GIVES ANSWER TODAY; 'YES' EXPECTED

BY GEORGE TAGGE.

After much indecision, State's Atty. Courtney will become the keystone of the Democratic state ticket by running for governor, according to all indications yesterday. He is expected to announce his candidacy today, the first day for filing petitions for state and county office.

Democratic politicians have been on tenterhooks since Courtney became the leading potential candidate when Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes announced two weeks ago that illness prevented his running.

Courtney on Wednesday told a downstate "draft Courtney" delegation that he would give his answer no later than today.

Aid May Seek Succession.

City hall leaders claimed to have knowledge that Courtney for governor petitions would be printed in time for distribution Monday. In many downstate counties formation of local tickets has been hampered by the Courtney mystery.

A "Courtney for Governor, Inc.," organization was granted a state charter in Springfield yesterday. The organization said it would operate in all counties of the state and maintain headquarters in Springfield. Petitioners were William H. Perkins Jr., Henry J. Kirk, Charles J. Daily, George W. Melton Jr., and Minnie R. Nelson, all of Springfield, and Mignon Huge of Beardstown.

Generally accepted was the rumor that part of Courtney's price for accepting the candidacy was that he shall have a hand in picking an agreed aspirant for state's attorney. Courtney has had three terms as Cook county prosecutor, featured by an animosity toward Mayor Kelly who reciprocated in kind.

This belief threw the spotlight back upon Courtney's assistants, chiefly Wilbert F. Crowley, his No. 1 aid, and William J. Tuohy, tax expert and attorney for the county board.

Albert J. Horan, executive subcommittee chairman of the Democratic county central committee, denied a report that petitions were being signed for Judge Harold G. Ward of the Superior court for state's attorney. Ward was Mayor Kelly's legislative spokesman when in the Illinois senate.

Action to Come Later.

"We won't have any state's attorney petitions for the first filing day," Horan said.

Others mentioned for prosecutor include Judges Jay A. Schiller and Stephen Adamowski of the Municipal court, Circuit Judge Cornelius J. Harrington, and James J. McDermott, member of the tax appeals board.

The slate of other county offices and a dozen Municipal judgeships consists entirely of incumbents. For sanitary district trustee, with four places at stake, the organization will file petitions for six men, one of whom may withdraw because of illness. That would leave a fight for one place.

SPECIAL SESSION TO CONSIDER JAP LAND BUYING BAN

Denver, Colo., Feb. 4 [Special].—Prompted by complaints of Japanese aliens buying land in Colorado, Gov. John C. Vivian announced today he will call a special session of the legislature to consider a proposed referendum on a constitutional amendment to prohibit enemy aliens not eligible for citizenship from owning property in the state.

Sponsors of the proposed amendment said citizens of Japanese descent would not be affected, but action was aimed directly at Jap aliens reported to be acquiring land holdings.

GRACE WILL FILE COL. M'CORMICK PETITION TODAY

Capt. William J. Grace, secretary of the Republican Nationalist Revival committee, left for Springfield yesterday with the purpose of filing a petition to place on the Illinois Presidential preferential primary ballot the name of Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"There is no law against drafting a candidate for President," Grace said. "Unless I break a leg or the train runs off the track, the petition will be filed."

Grace said the petition would put Col. McCormick's name on the ballot "unless they recognize any withdrawal he might make down in Springfield." The petition bears 4,995 names, he added; 5,000 is the maximum number permitted. He admitted that he was disregarding Col. McCormick's request that the draft movement be dropped.

"This is a recognition of Wendell Willkie's challenge that 24 hours after a petition to put McCormick on the primary ballot was filed in Illinois he would file one for himself," Grace said.

Willkie Issues Statement.

In New York, where he was preparing to leave on a tour of seven western states, Willkie issued this statement:

"It is interesting that Col. McCormick announced a few weeks ago that he would under no circumstances run, or permit his name to be entered in the Illinois primary. And now, just as I am leaving on a long planned trip, and a few days before the expiration date of filing in Illinois, the Republican nationalist revival committee announces that it is filing on the colonel's behalf.

[Actually Grace is submitting the petition on the first day for such filings under the law. The last day for filing is Feb. 21.]

"I repeat today, however, that if Col. McCormick will publicly declare, in time for me to comply with the law, that the Republican nationalist revival committee is filing on his behalf, I will file in the Illinois primary as soon as legal technicalities can be complied with.

"There is nothing I would enjoy so much as debating the issues in a campaign thruout the state of Illinois with Col. McCormick. There are a good many questions I would like to ask him."

Col. McCormick Comments.

"What? Is Willkie still pretending to run for President? What's the ticket? Willkie and Joe Schenck? Mr. Grace has not communicated with me. I have nothing to add to my letter to Mr. Berve of some weeks ago."

Willkie, as chairman of Twentieth Century-Fox Film corporation, is closely associated with Joseph M. Schenck, executive production head of the film company, who in 1942 served a prison term upon his conviction of perjury in connection with a "loan" of $100,000 to Willie Bioff, convicted pander, racketeer, and former head of the motion picture workers' union. Willkie was elected chairman of the board to succeed Schenck and restore an odor of respectability to the film corporation after Schenck's indictment. Schenck was paroled by President Roosevelt's parole board after serving four months of a year's sentence. Last year he was given a seven year contract as executive production head of the film company.

Wrote Berve on Wishes.

On Dec. 27, 1943, Col. McCormick, in reply to a request from Ben L. Berve, chairman of the Republican state central committee, for a personal expression of his attitude toward the movement to enter his name in the Illinois primary, said:

"May I ask you to tell your associates and any others who are kind enough to speak of me in this capacity that I desire that my name not be used as a candidate in the preferential primary for the President of the United States?"

He said that to permit the use of his name in the primary would necessitate his giving up his position as editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, and that he felt it would be a "great mistake for me to give up the activity which has been proven useful to undertake one of uncertain value to my country."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's name will be entered in the Illinois Presidential preferential primary today by Capt. Joseph Savage, who leads the MacArthur movement in the midwest states. Petitions bearing 5,000 names will be filed at the secretary of state's office in Springfield.

Garage Owner Regains Half His Phone Service

The Illinois commerce commission yesterday dismissed the petition of Max Abram, owner of the Naborhood garage at 1509-13 Morse avenue, for an order restoring his phone service. The Illinois Bell Telephone company agreed to install one telephone to replace two which were removed, it was shown, on the request of Police Commissioner Allman after a "gambling investigation." Abram said the telephones were of the coin box type and he had no way of governing their use.

MARION GLADSTONE.

Miss Marion Gladstone, 21 years old, a teacher in an Elgin school, "practiced" on adults Thursday evening when four bandits invaded the car in which she was sitting in front of the Sovereign hotel, 6200 Kenmore avenue, where she lives.

Miss Gladstone was talking to her escort, Harold Robbins, 26 years old, 5239 South Kedzie avenue, when the four men forced their way into the car. One bandit drove while the others searched the victims. All the while Miss Gladstone quizzed the robbers on how they started a life of crime, instructed them in the error of their ways, and tried to teach them that crime does not pay.

Unimpressed, the gang leader drove Miss Gladstone back to the hotel, forced her to call her mother upstairs to ask the desk clerk to advance her $50, appropriated the money, along with her A gas coupons, $10 in cash and a $60 watch from Robbins, and a $45 check of Miss Gladstone. When the robbers departed an hour later, they tossed Miss Gladstone's watch back to her.

G. O. P. PERFECTS HOUSING PLANS FOR CONVENTION

Most out of town spectators coming to the Republican national convention June 26 will have to get rooms in the outlying neighborhoods, Ernest M. Morris of South Bend, Ind., chairman of the convention housing committee, said last night. The committee will continue its work on arrangements today.

"There are 5,400 rooms in the downtown area," Morris said. "There are 1,050 delegates, as many alternates, their wives, governors, senators, congressmen, state candidates, and party officials. Other spectators will have to room elsewhere."

National Committeeman Werner W. Schroeder of Illinois was host last night to six committeemen from other states, including National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler. Mrs. Schroeder and Mrs. Bertha Baur were hosts to wives of several of the committeemen at Mrs. Baur's home.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Award of the bronze oak leaf cluster to the distinguished flying cross to Technical Sgt. Robert M. PRESIDENT TRIES TO DISCREDIT U.S. PRESS—BRICKER

Columbus, O., Feb. 4 (AP).—Gov. John W. Bricker said tonight that the Roosevelt administration had made a "studied attempt to undermine the newspapers and radio" and called for lifting of governmental restrictions which he contended endangered the freedoms of press and speech. He spoke before the Ohio Newspaper association.

Bricker, a candidate for the Republican Presidental nomination, said all sources of information must be kept open and proposed, tho "it may be millennial," a free press thruout the world.

Bricker said administration literature is full of expressions which "are evidence of a calculated purpose to discredit the press."

Resentful of Criticism.

"The New Deal is peculiarly resentful of honest criticism," he said. "Publishers, editors, correspondents and sports writers have been denounced. One newspaper man was told by the President to put on a dunce cap and sit in the corner. To another one, he awarded the iron cross and another he chided for asking 'picayune' questions. Recently the President was asked if he had any comment on the appeal of the Associated Press case. His only reply was a flippant question as to whether 'the country club is still running.'"

The spirit of freedom, the governor said, cries out for intelligent leadership from the press.

"If that leadership fails," he said, "American liberty is in danger. Political propaganda must be destroyed as an instrumentality of government. We must insist that appropriate sources of information be kept open to the press of the country. Public information should never be restricted to the handout, off-the-record and not for attribution methods. News must be available and free to all alike as well as the right to print the news.

Pioneers in Great Cause.

"I have read 'Barriers Down,' a presentation by Mr. Kent Cooper [executive director of the Associated Press] in regard to freer dissemination of news around the world. I have followed the thinking of Dean Ackerman [of the Columbia university school of journalism] and Mr. Hugh Baillie [general manager of the United Press]. It may be millennial to propose a world free press, but peace likewise may seem millennial. They with many of you are pioneers in this great cause. The cause is noble and the goal worthy. May those who think and strive for a better tomorrow be vigilant in a cause of a world free press."

2,000 SPARS TO BE GUESTS TONIGHT OF AIR THEATER

The Chicago Theater of the Air will broadcast Rudolf Friml's "The Firefly" in its 12th show from Medinah temple this evening. The program will be dedicated to the SPARS, the women's reserve of the Coast Guard, 2,000 of whom will be among the 4,000 guests. The program will be broadcast over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. This program will be followed by a full hour of entertainment by the Coast Guard.

[Details in today's Women in War Work column.]

Marion Claire will be starred as Nina and Attilio Baggiore as Jack Travers. Bruce Foote will sing the role of John Thurston. Henry Weber will direct the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

The dramatic cast will include Elmyra Roessler as Nina; Olan Soule as Travers; John Barclay as Thurston; Hope Summers as Mrs. Van Dare; Laurette Fillbrandt as Geraldine Van Dare, Marvin Mueller as narrator.

MISS TERESE MORSE.

Pvt. J. A. Daily.

"Hey, that's my girl!" he shouted.

A mail clerk explained that the picture had been found, without wrapping, address or other identification, in a mail sack. The original of the photo, Miss Terese Morse, 20 year old secretary at Swift & Co., explained that it must have come unwrapped en route. She had addressed it to Pvt. Daily.

ILLINOIS GIVES 2,500 CONVICTS CHANCE IN ARMY

Twenty-five hundred inmates of Illinois prisons have been released to the army, Warden Joseph E. Ragen of the Illinois State penitentiary told the Illinois Circuit and Superior Judges' association yesterday at the association's midwinter conference in the Hotel Sherman. He said that the reports on them from the army had been good.

[Men released to the army have been those who have not been guilty of heinous crimes and who have met the army's mental and physical requirements.]

General agreement as to the unworkability of the new Illinois mental health act was reached at a session of the Illinois County and Probate Judges' association convention also held in the Sherman. Judge Donald M. Gregg, president of the association, appointed a committee to draft a recommendation as to the act to be presented to the convention today.

PETITION FILERS FORM LINE DAY AHEAD OF TIME

Representatives of five Lake county Republican candidates lined up yesterday afternoon in the county clerk's office in Waukegan, and, if they are still in line at 8 a. m. today, will get their candidates' names at the top of the ballot for each office in the April primary election. Four of those represented are incumbents: Harry A. Hall, state's attorney; Robert J. Pearsall, county auditor; Howard L. Scott, recorder of deeds, and L. J. Wilmot, circuit clerk. Also in line was a representative of Garfield R. Leaf, now deputy county treasurer, who will file a petition for county coroner. The present coroner, Dr. John L. Taylor, who has served for 44 years, has announced he will not seek reëlection. No Democrats appeared to present petitions.

PUBLISHERS SEE NEW GAG EFFORT IN PAPER ORDER

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The American Newspaper Publishers association said today the future of United States newsprint mills was threatened by a war production board order reducing the amount of wood pulp that can be used in this country to make newsprint paper.

"The ANPA newsprint committee is fearful that this is another step in the long series of developments, taking advantage of war conditions, to hamstring the American newsprint industry to the disadvantage of American newspapers," the publishers' association asserted in a statement.

The curtailment in the use of pulp for newsprint was made necessary by requirements for other purposes, WPB said, and would be balanced by supplies from Canada.

Reduces Domestic Supply.

It will give American newsprint makers a still smaller part of the domestic market than the 20 per cent they held in 1943, however.

In a letter to Rep. Boren [D., Okla.] of the house newsprint committee the ANPA group said it believed "such a restrictive order is unnecessary and will be detrimental" to the future of United States newsprint makers.

American mills turned out 804,853 tons of newsprint last year, nearly 21 per cent less than in 1941. For 1944 the WPB originally cut this to an average of 60,000 tons a month, or 29 per cent under the 1941 level.

New England mills chiefly are affected, since Pacific northwest and Texas newsprint producers apparently were excluded.

May Exempt Workers.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Chairman Reynolds [D., N. C.] assured representatives of the lumber and pulp industry today of early senate military committee hearings on a proposal to exempt pulp cutters and lumber workers from military induction in view of "a man power shortage."

Similar hearings previously were ordered before a house military subcommittee headed by Chairman Brooks [D., La.].

SAMPLE IN 48TH WARD GOES 91-2 AGAINST WILLKIE

Mrs. Leila G. Whitney, Republican precinct captain of the 54th precinct, 48th ward, reported yesterday the results of a postcard poll of 110 Republican voters in the precinct, asking their views on the candidacy or Wendell L. Willkie for the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

Ninety-three voters replied, and 91 said they were against Willkie. Two voters said they favored him.

On the same postcard the voters were asked whether they were for or against George Washington's principles for the preservation of the United States. They voted, 92 to 1, for Washington's principles.

Mrs. Whitney said she took the poll after reading a magazine statement quoting Willkie as saying the people are for him, altho organization leaders oppose him.

F. D. R. Refuses to Discuss Russia's Autonomy Move

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt made no comment today on Russia's action in granting autonomy in foreign affairs to her constituent republics, but said he had read about it with great interest. Possibly because of very long experience and, unlike some other people, he said, he was making no comment. He said he did not know anything about the matter and that it requires more courage to say nothing when you don't know.

COUNCILMEN ASK PLAYGROUNDS TO CUT AUTO TOLL

Recommendations that additional playgrounds and lots be obtained for the city's children were made yesterday after Ald. George D. Kells [28], chairman of the city council committee on traffic and public safety, disclosed a growing death toll of children in automobile accidents.

While the total fatalities in the city dropped to 372 in 1943 from the 466 killed in 1942, he said, the number of children under 15 who lost their lives increased from 55 in 1942 to 61 in 1943. Of the 61 fatalities, 52 occurred during the school months. As a means of reducing accidents, Kells suggested additional play spaces and better supervision of children whose parents are working in war plants.

A subcommittee headed by Ald. William J. Cowhey [41] was appointed to confer with members of the city recreation commission, the bureau of small parks, the Chicago plan commission, and the Chicago park district to work out a plan for more playgrounds.

WILLKIE AND HE THINK ALIKE ON TAX, SAYS F. D. R.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt, asked today for his observations on Wendell L. Willkie's call for higher taxes, pictured himself and the Republican leader alike in thinking of the future.

The President's first reaction was a statement that he had not had the nerve to ask for as much new revenue as Willkie did in a Monday speech—some 16 billion dollars—that he had called for only 10 billions.

Then he went on to tell his news conference that in any case he and Willkie both were thinking of the next generation, not just this one.

Both the President and Willkie have been challenged by the tax drafting committeemen on Capitol hill to prove that taxes much higher than an estimated 43½ billion dollar annual total can be handled by this generation.

Roosevelt Tells About His Operation for a Wen

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt disclosed today he had undergone a minor operation for removal of a wen from the back of his head. He told a news conference he had had the growth for 20 years and that it had increased in size lately. So he had it removed under local anesthesia. He said he spent half an hour in the naval hospital.

SOLDIER BALLOT BILLS SNARLED BY SENATE VOTE

Rejects State Rule After House Passes It.

BY JOHNSON KANADY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—The soldier vote wound up tonight in a seemingly hopeless parliamentary tangle as the senate appeared ready to approve a modified federal soldier voting plan in the face of the house's crushing defeat of the same idea yesterday.

Administration leaders, rallying from their defeat of last night in the house, held their forces in line in the senate today to defeat, 46 to 42, an amendment which would have limited use of federal ballots to soldiers from states which do not have adequate state absentee voting regulations. The amendment was offered by Sen. Taft [R., O.].

Slap at President.

The victory was a shallow one for the administration, however, because no one seems to know what to do now. The situation is this:

The house, in a direct slap at President Roosevelt, last night defeated the plan calling for federal control of the service ballot and passed a bill giving control of the vote to the states. This bill, altho amended in the house, was a senate bill and had been approved by the senate last month over the protests of administration leaders. The bill, after the house passed it last night, was sent back today with the amendments to the senate, where it now reposes.

Normally the senate would consider the house amendments, concur in them, or reject them, and send the bill to a conference committee to iron out difference.

But, while the house was working on the state ballot plan sent to the house by the senate, administration forces were active. They placed a new bill before the senate which embodied the same federal bobtailed ballot plan once rejected by the senators. That bill now is nearing completion. Indications today were that the senate will approve it.

May Get No Attention.

The problem is what to do with it when it is approved. The senate already has passed one bill on the subject. The house has approved that bill. If the senate sends an entirely new bill on the same subject to the house it probably will get no attention.

The general belief is that the senate, if the administration strength holds, will tack the federal ballot plan, now nearing passage stage, on the amendments which the house put on the state ballot bill the senate passed last month, and throw the grotesque piece of legislation back at the house. Some observers say that if this happens the house will again turn down the federal ballot feature and the problem will be worked out in conference.

In the face of these problems senators agreed to give up their usual Saturday holiday and work on the administration proposal tomorrow.

A Grueling Session.

Today's grueling session accomplished little. The Taft proposal was defeated. A motion to take up the house version was defeated on a tie vote, 42 to 42.

Sen. Green [D., R. I.], co-sponsor of the federal ballot plan, amended the bill today in an attempt to remove from army and other officers the authority to bring about "mass military voting" which opponents of the plan have declared would be a result of the bill's passage.

The change takes from the officers the authority to set a specific voting day and makes it unlawful for any commissioned, noncommissioned, warrant, or petty officer to suggest to any member of the armed services that he shall vote, shall not vote, or that he shall vote or not vote for any candidate. It would also be unlawful, under the change, to require any service personnel to march to a polling place.

An amendment by Sen. La Follette [R., Wis.] was adopted to ban polling of soldier political opinion either before or after they vote.

HOW SENATE VOTED ON TAFT PROPOSAL FOR ARMY BALLOT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Here is the vote by which the senate today rejected, 46 to 42, a state's rights substitute proposal offered by Sen. Taft [R., Ohio] to the pending service vote bill:

20,000 STRIKE; FIGHT NEW DEAL SUPPORT OF CIO

Leader Blames Labor Laws for Tieup.

WLB Orders Hearing.

The strike brought swift action from the WLB and denunciation from individual representatives of the government and the military services. Threatening to invoke penalties, the labor board directed officers of the MESA to appear at a hearing in Washington on Monday and said it would use subpena power if necessary.

Smith defied the threat and replied that it would be impossible for union officers to attend the hearing because the union's machinery, involving votes of delegates to the executive board, could not be brought into action by that time.

"Only the WLB's ignorance of a labor union's structure could be responsible for such an order," Smith said. "I don't know what the sanctions or penalties are, but we are prepared to meet them. Threats, after our organizational rights are ignored, will not get our members back to work."

Demand Workers Return.

Ralph A. Bard, acting secretary of the navy, demanded that the men return to work "as a condition of loyalty to their country."

Chairman Edwin E. Witte of the Detroit regional WLB, charged that Smith was "clearly interfering with due processes of law" in challenging NLRB procedure at Toledo and was rendering a great disservice to organized labor.

SAVING OF JEWS MUST BE SPEEDY, AID CHIEF WARNS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—John W. Pehle, newly designated head of the war refugee board, declared today its job of rescuing Europe's Jews from extermination "is one that has to be done in the next few months." He added that the main story of assistance probably can not be told until after the war "because it will consist of accelerating the underground movement" now getting refugees out of Nazi-occupied territory.

Pehle since 1940 has been an assistant to Secretary Morgenthau in charge of the treasury's foreign funds control division. He will be given a leave of absence to devote all time to the board, created by President Roosevelt on Jan. 22.

Pehle said the board, composed of Secretaries Morgenthau, Hull, and Stimson, would operate with a "small professional staff" because it plans to use the services of existing agencies in federal departments as well as the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration and the foreign economic administration.

FARMER UPSETS HEARING; WANTS NO FEDERAL AID!

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Members of the house agricultural committee raised their eyebrows today when a Lancaster county, Pa., farmer told them he and many of his neighbors wanted no financial assistance from the federal government.

In fact, said Harold Endslow, who tills 360 acres near Marietta, some of them have been returning parity payment checks uncashed. "We don't want subsidies," he said in answer to a question. "We'd rather stand up and take it with the rest if we have to."

Appearing in favor of a continued crop insurance program, Endslow said there should be low premium rates. The bill under consideration provides for payment by farmers of half the premium on wheat, corn, cotton, and tobacco and full government payment of premiums on eight war crops.

A TIRED HOUSE CONVENES FOR JUST 21 MINUTES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—A sleepy eyed house, with fewer than 50 members present, yawned today and adjourned after 21 minutes—exhausted from yesterday's hectic near-midnight session on the soldiers' vote bill.

But Rep. Rankin [D., Miss.], who teamed with Republicans to help defeat the administration's federal ballot plan, got in one more word on the subject before the short session ended.

Rankin took the floor to reply to last night's satiric suggestion by Rep. Marcantonio [A. L., N. Y.], who was elected with Communist support, that Rankin's picture be placed on the house soldier vote bill with the caption, "Rankin, leader of the Republican party."

Terming it a "scurrilous proposal," the lifelong Mississippi Democrat said, however: "If Mr. Marcantonio is to lead the Democratic party, then you may be assured I'm going to find another party for myself."

Note: Members discovered after adjournment they had unanimously adopted at today's session a resolution waiving import duties on flax seed for 90 days.

WAR PRISONERS MAY GO TO AREAS SHORT OF LABOR

BY LLOYD NORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—The war department and the war man power commission are considering the establishment of war prisoner camps near labor shortage areas where the 165,000 German and Italian captives can be utilized effectively in nonmilitary production, WMC Chairman McNutt said today.

He said five teams, representing the two government agencies, have been surveying the labor shortage areas for possible sites where additional prison camps would be built to supply needed man power in farming or industry. Some employers, he said, have offered to provide housing and other facilities for prisoners if the army will approve.

McNutt explained that, altho approximately a third of the prisoners have been employed since last summer, wider and more effective utilization of this labor resource has been prevented by the problems involved in guarding the prisoners. The army requires that they be returned to camps each night.

Findings Awaited.

Findings of the field teams, as to the need for more side-camps, may be considered in revising regulations on the use of the war prisoners, McNutt said. He added that WMC and the war department are attempting to make more of the prisoners available for a wider variety of projects.

Limited employment of the prisoners was started last summer on farms. Since then they have been used in a variety of jobs such as cotton picking, peanut harvesting, logging, lumbering, food processing, and cutting pulpwood in southern states.

Under an agreement between the army and WMC governing the employment of prisoners, WMC receives requests for war prisoners from employers and then certifies the need for such labor to the prison commanders, McNutt explained. The employer pays wage rates prevailing in his community. The prisoner receives 80 cents a day, and the rest of his wages are retained by the army for camp maintenance. The prisoners' wages and conditions of employment are governed by the Geneva convention, which forbids the use of the captives in war industries.

McNutt said there were 172,879 war prisoners in the United States last Jan. 1, of whom 7,598 were officers not available for work unless they volunteer. There are almost three times as many Germans as Italians.

He said small groups of prisoners have been working under contract in 25 states. During October, prisoners were employed for 1,223,269 man days outside of internment camps, compared with 800,423 man days during September. McNutt said the prisoners' work generally has been satisfactory.

Employers desiring war prisoners, McNutt said, may apply at the nearest federal employment office. The requests are relayed by state WMC directors to commanders of prison camps. He warned that employers will be required to pay for the prisoners' labor at the same rates as for free American labor.

ASSESS $104,278 AGAINST CITY IN SUBWAY SUIT

A jury last night awarded the owners of the Monadnock block, Jackson and Dearborn streets, judgment for $104,278 in their suit against the city for reimbursement of money spent to prevent potential damage because of the digging of the Dearborn street subway.

The suit, tried before Judge Cornelius J. Harrington in Circuit court, is the first involving alleged subway construction damage to go before a jury. The jury deliberated 10 hours.

The building owners sued for $235,000, contending they had expended that amount in reinforcing their building to prevent future damage because of the subway. The city, however, charged that the owners had encroached 12 feet upon the public street in erecting the building and that the money was expended in making corrections to bring the building within the proper limits.

British Coal Production Takes Drop in 4 Weeks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 4.—British coal production for the four weeks ended Jan. 22 showed a drop of 167,000 tons weekly, the fuel ministry announced today. The decline was attributed to Christmas and New Year holidays, to transportation difficulties, and to unofficial strikes.

LODGE RESIGNS FROM SENATE TO FIGHT OVERSEAS

Resumes Army Duty as a Major.

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—Sen. Lodge [R., Mass.] was not in his accustomed seat in the senate today. A letter explained he had resigned as senator to resume his place as an overseas combat soldier.

His office said he was already in a major's uniform and it was understood that the young senator, who has been mentioned as a Republican Presidential possibility in 1948, had left Washington.

Veterans of the senate said they believed he is the first senator in history to resign from the senate to fight for his country, altho two senators fought in the Civil war while retaining their offices.

Served in Libya.

Lodge, who is 41 years old, served as a major in the armored forces in Libya earlier in this war under the same arrangement. President Roosevelt however recently decreed that members of congress cannot

Sen. Lodge's case contrasts sharply with that of two Democratic congressmen—Rep. Gore [Okla.] and Rep. Jackson [Wash.]—who announced they would continue to serve in congress instead of the army after President Roosevelt issued his order forbidding congressmen to do both. The decision of Gore and Jackson was interpreted as a move to help the Democrats maintain their slim majority in the house. Gore already had been inducted into the army.

Saltonstall May Get Job.

Lodge's senatorial office vacancy will be filled by appointment by the governor of Massachusetts. Boston dispatches said the governor, Leverett Saltonstall, would himself become senator, resigning as governor and then receiving the appointment from Lt. Gov. Horace Cahill, who would become governor.

In his letter, Lodge said:

"The fact that the United States is entering the period of large scale fighting has, after grave thought, brought me to the definite conclusion that, given my age and military training, I must henceforth serve my country as a combat soldier in the army overseas."

Broom Shortage Laid to Big Military Demand

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—The war production board today disclosed a growing shortage of civilian brooms, resulting from heavy military demand and the scarcity of broom corn and handles.

NAVY SINKS NAZI SHIPS CARRYING JAP RUBBER, TIN

Washington, Feb. 4 (AP).—Sneaking thru the South Atlantic with cargoes vital to the axis, three Nazi blockade runners ran into blazing guns of American warships and were sent to the bottom. The blockade runners started from Japanese held ports of the Pacific, the navy said today, and were loaded with thousands of tons of rubber, tin, fats, and ores.

Much of this was salvaged, including hundreds of tons of baled rubber which floated after the runners were sunk.

Attempt to Scuttle Ships.

Many prisoners were taken from the three ships whose crews attempted to scuttle their vessels in efforts to prevent capture. Explosions fired the ships but they remained afloat until sunk by shells from the cruiser Omaha and the destroyers Jouett and Somers. The largest runner was the Burgenland, 7,302 ton Hamburg-American ship built in Hamburg, Germany, in 1928. The others were the Rio Grande, 6,062 tons and the 6,528 ton Weserland of Germany registry.

Stealing thru early January morning darkness the Weserland was the first to be chased and sunk in a 48 hour period. She was sighted by patrol planes and the Somers sped into the challenge.

The Somers skipper, Comdr. William C. Hughes Jr., directed a salvo from the five inch main battery which hit squarely. The Nazi crew began clambering overboard and into life boats. Some remained to carry out scuttling orders.

Try More Scuttling.

As the Omaha and the Jouett, skippered by Comdr. John C. Parham Jr., Tuscaloosa, Ala., raced to the attack, smoke and flames spouted from the Rio Grande. Her crewmen had endeavored to scuttle her with demolition charges but failed.

"The two American warships fired six inch and five inch shells into the blockade runner and she soon sank," the navy related. Vice Adm. Jonas Ingram commanded the navy unit.

The next day the Omaha and the Jouett located the Burgenland and sent it down with shells after the enemy crew again had fired demolition charges. In November, 1941, the Omaha captured the German motor ship Odenwald which was trying to slip thru the South Atlantic masqueraded as an American merchantman. The Jouett last summer was credited with destroying a German submarine.

TELLS OF NAVY'S SINKING OF TWO SUPPLY BOATS

Wisconsin Man Hero of Atlantic Fight.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 4 [Special].—Lt. [j. g.] Thomas A. Wood, 28, 1916 East Beverly road, Shorewood, a son of Arthur A. Wood, an employe of the Chicago & North Western railroad, who has been serving with the south Atlantic fleet as an aviator, was home today for leave, proudly wearing the air medal, and with a citation from his admiral in his pocket.

The citation from Rear Adm. Jonas H. Ingram, fleet commander, and former football coach and athletic director of the United States naval academy, is for "exceptionally meritorious service in the line of his profession while acting as pilot of an aircraft from the U. S. S. Omaha when the German blockade runners Rio Grande and Burgenland were sighted and sunk in the South Atlantic early in January."

"Showed Great Skill."

It says that "Lt. Wood showed great persistence and professional skill by assisting in the sighting and keeping contact with the blockade runners, which led to their subsequent interception and sinking by the U. S. S. Omaha and the U. S. S. Jouett, a destroyer."

Lt. Wood's version of it is that there wasn't much to it. We were constantly engaged in what might be called tireless but monotonous patrols, he said.

"One morning I was on patrol about 30 miles ahead of my cruiser when I saw this ship sitting dead on the water in a rain squall," he continued. "It was evident that she couldn't account for herself and also evident she wasn't one of ours because they don't act that way. I called up a destroyer and she sank it."

Sights Second Ship.

Lt. Wood said he sighted the second ship the next day while on patrol; that he took a bearing and flew back to the cruiser. "The Omaha soon picked her up on the horizon," he said. "As soon as she saw us she gave us a couple of salvos. She was heavily armed. We replied with a couple of our own and her crew set her on fire."

Lt. Wood said there were about 80 men on the first ship, and a similar number on the second. Subsequently, they were picked up by other naval units and taken to internment camps.

Woods, who was half back on the Shorewood High school football team, from which he graduated in 1934, attended the University of Wisconsin where he graduated from the school of commerce in 1941.

OPA SETS FIRST PRICE CEILINGS FOR SAUSAGES

The office of price administration yesterday set ceiling prices on 32 kinds and grades of sausages. New quarterly charts were issued on all meat prices, but there were no changes from current ceilings. The sausages were put under ceilings for the first time.

Local ration boards this week curtailed the gasoline rations of 42 motorists convicted of speeding, Paul A. H. Shults, acting area director of the office of price administration, said yesterday. Revocations ranged from one A coupon to all A and C rations for 50 days.

SERVICES TELL HOW TO COLLECT DISCHARGE PAY

More Than a Million Now Eligible.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—With the mustering out pay law signed by the President, the army and navy tonight outlined the steps veterans should take to get the payment. Those eligible after the law's passage will get the payments without application.

Persons discharged prior to the signing of the measure, the statement said, should follow this procedure:

1. Submit a certificate of discharge. To assure return of this certificate write the present address on the paper.

Informal Application.

2. Submit an informal type of certified application giving the name and address, service number, serial number, or file number; certifying that the applicant was not discharged or released from active duty to accept employment without having had service outside of the United States; stating that the applicant is not now on active duty; that he has not made and will not make any other application for mustering-out pay; and giving the state of which he was a resident at the time of induction or enlistment and telling whether he has had foreign service.

Commissioned officers will be required to furnish evidence of length and termination of service.

Navy officers will make application to the bureau of naval personnel, and coast guard and marine officers to their respective Washington headquarters. Army officers will make application to one of the finance offices in various cities.

$100 to $300 Provided.

The law provides from $100 to $300 for each eligible veteran. Muster-out pay of World War I, amounted to about $60. The new scale and the commensurately higher number of military personnel in this war will cost the nation approximately 3 billion dollars.

There already have been 1,300,000 discharges since Pearl Harbor. These service men may apply now to the war and navy departments for their mustering-out pay. Within 30 days of the application, it is to be acted upon.

The mustering-out pay is denied to those eligible to retirement pay, those discharged to take civilian jobs, the dishonorably discharged, those whose total period of service has been as a student in special training programs, and those ranking above a captain.

The others get $100 for less than 60 days service in the United States, $200 for 60 days or more in this country, and $300 for service overseas or in Alaska. The first $100 is to be paid immediately, and the remainder in $100 monthly instalments.

FIND BODY NEAR TRACKS.

The mangled body of Evert Lorents, 39 years old, 1937 South 48th court, Cicero, a welder, was found yesterday along the right of way of the elevated lines at 49th avenue in Cicero.

MURDER STALKS BATTERED YANKS ON BATAAN TRAIL

from a pile of canned and boxed food. We were famished, but it seemed worse than useless to ask the Japs for anything. An elderly American colonel did, however. He crossed the road and, after pointing to the food and to the drooping prisoners, he went thru the motions of eating.

A squat Jap officer grinned at him and picked up a can of salmon. Then he smashed it against the colonel's head, opening the American's cheek from eye to jawbone. The officer staggered and turned back toward us, wiping the blood off.

Jap Ferocity Grows.

It seemed as tho the Japs had been waiting for just such a brutal display to end the scene. They ordered us to our feet and herded us back into the road.

We knew now the Japs would respect neither age nor rank. Their ferocity grew as we marched on into the afternoon. They no longer were content with mauling stragglers or pricking them with bayonet points. The thrusts were intended to kill.

We had marched about a mile after the sun treatment when I stumbled over a man writhing in the hot dust of the road. He was a Filipino soldier who had been bayoneted thru the stomach. Within a quarter of a mile I walked past another. This soldier prisoner had been rolled into the path of the trucks and crushed beneath the heavy wheels.

Prisoners' Senses Numbed.

The huddled and smashed figures beside the road eventually became commonplace to us. The human mind has an amazing faculty of adjusting itself to shock. In this case it may have been that heat and misery had numbed our senses. We remained keenly aware, however, that these murders might well be precursers of our own, if we should falter or lag.

As we straggled past hospital No. 2 the Japs were setting up artillery and training it on Corregidor. The thick jungle hid the hospital itself, but we could see that guns were all around it. The Japs regarded this as master strategy; the Rock [Corregidor] would not dare return their fire. I wondered what the concussion of the heavy guns would do to the stricken men in the hospital wards.

The cannonade began after we had passed by. I had gone only a few steps when a violent blow on the head almost sent me to my knees. I thought one of the Jap guns had made a direct hit on me. My steel helmet jammed down over my eyes with a clang that made my ears ring. I pulled it clear and staggered around to see a noncommissioned Jap brandishing a club the size of a child's baseball bat. He was squealing and pointing to the dented helmet. He lifted the club again. I threw the helmet into the ditch and he motioned me to march on. Like many of my comrades, I now was without protection against the merciless sun.

Halt Inside Rice Paddy.

Jap artillery was opening up all along the southern tip of Bataan. The area behind us reechoed to the thud and crash of gunfire. Grayish smoke puffs speckled Corregidor's sides. The Rock was blasting back at the Japs, but most of its shells were falling in the Mariveles region whence we had come.

At sundown we crossed Cabcaben air field, from which the last American planes to leave Luzon island had taken off not 39 hours before. Here again Jap artillery was going into action. We were marched across the field and halted inside a rice paddy beyond. We had had no food or water, and none was offered, but we were grateful of the opportunity to lie down and rest.

I was just dropping off when there came an outburst of yelling and screeching. The Japs had charged in among us and were kicking us to our feet. They herded us back to the road and started marching us eastward again. During the brief respite leg muscles had stiffened. Walking was torture.

"Killing for Diversion."

It was dark when we marched across Bataan field, which with Cabcaben field I had commanded two days before. It was difficult walking in the darkness. Now and again we passed the huddled forms of men who had collapsed from fatigue or had been bayoneted. I didn't kid myself that I was safe simply because I was keeping up the pace. I would not have been surprised at any time to feel a Jap blade slide between my ribs. The bloodthirsty devils now were killing us for diversion.

The march continued until about 10 p. m. When we were halted some naive individual started a rumor that we were to be given water. Instead we were about faced and marched back to the westward. For two more hours we stumbled over the ground we had just covered.

It was midnight when we recrossed Bataan field and kept going. We were within a short distance of Cabcaben field when the Japs diverted the line into a tiny rice paddy. There was no room to lie down. Some of us tried to rest in a half squat. Others drew up their knees and laid their heads on the legs of the men next to them. Jap guards stood around the edges of the little field, their feet almost touching the outer fringe of men.

Slugs Yank with Rifle Butt.

I heard a cry, then the thudding blows at one side of the paddy. An American soldier so tortured by the thirst that he could not sleep had asked a Jap guard for water. The Jap fell on him with his fists, then slugged him into insensibility with a rifle butt.

The thirst of all had become almost unbearable, but remembering what had happened to the colonel earlier in the day we asked for nothing. A Jap officer walked along just after the thirsty soldier had been beaten. He appeared surprised that we wanted water. However, he permitted several Americans to collect canteens for their comrades and fill them at a stagnant caribou wallow which had been additionally befouled by seeping sea water. We held our noses to shut out the nauseating reek, but drank all the water we could get.

At dawn of the second day the impatient Japs stepped among and upon us, kicking us into wakefulness. We were hollow eyed and as exhausted as we had been when we went to sleep. As we stumbled into the road we passed a Jap noncommissioned officer who was eating meat and rice.

Food Promised.

"Pretty soon you eat," he told us.

The rising sun cast its blinding light into our eyes as we marched. The temperature rose by the minute. Noon came and went. The midday heat was searing. At 1 p. m. the column was halted and Jap noncoms told American and Filipno soldiers they might fill their canteens from a dirty puddle beside the road. There was no food.

During the afternoon traffic picked up again. Troop laden trucks sped past us. A grimacing Jap leaned far out, holding his rifle by the barrel. As the truck roared by he knocked an American soldier senseless with the gun's stock. Other Japs saw this and yelled. From now on we kept out of reach if we could. Several more American and Filipino prisoners were struck down.

Prisoners Segregated.

At 2 p. m. we were told it would be necessary to segregate the prisoners as to rank; colonels together, majors together, and so on. This separated all units from their officers and afforded opportunity for another hour of sun treatment. There was no mention of food.

The line of march was almost due north now. We reached Balanga, about 20 miles from Cabcaben field, at sundown. We were marched into the courtyard of a large prisonlike structure, dating to the Spanish days, and told we would eat, then spend the night there.

At one side of the yard food was bubbling in great cauldrons. Rice and soy sauce were boiling together. Jap kitchen corpsmen were opening dozens of cans and dumping vienna sausage into the savory mess. The aromatic steam that drifted over from those pots had us almost crazy. While we waited we were given a little water.

Japs Display Food.

We imagined the rice and sausages were for us, tho we saw hundreds of ragged and sick Filipinos behind a barbed wire barricade near-by who had only filthy, fly covered rice to eat. After drinking we were ordered into the line for what appeared to be a routine search. When it was finished an officer shouted something and the attitude of our guards swiftly changed. They ordered us out of the patio and lined us up in a field across the road. As we left, grinning Japs held up steaming ladles of sausage and rice. The officer followed us to the field, then began stamping up and down, spouting denunciations and abuse. When he calmed enough to be understood, we heard this:

"When you came here you were told you would eat and be let to sleep. Now that is changed. We have found pistols concealed among three American officers. In punishment for these offenses you will not be given food. You will march to Orani [five miles to the north] before you sleep."

Add Mental Torture.

This was a lie. If a pistol had been found, the owner would have been shot, beaten to death, or beheaded on the spot. Besides, we knew that the searchers hadn't overlooked even a toothbrush, to say nothing of a pistol. The Japs simply were adding mental torture to the physical. The Jap officer saw he wasn't believed. He did just what a Jap might be expected to do. Shortly after we resumed the march a staff car pulled up beside us.

Three American officers were dragged out of line and thrown into it. This in the words of Gilbert and Sullivan's Pooh Bah was "corroborative detail, intended to lend artistic verisimilitude [appearance of truth] to an otherwise bald and unconvincing narrative." We never saw the three officers again, tho it is not hard to guess their fate. Men who had stood near two of them during the search said no guns had been found.

Our guards had been increased for the night march and rigid discipline was imposed. We were formed into columns of fours. A new set of guards came up on bicycles and we were forced to walk practically at double quick to keep up. After two hours these were replaced by a group on foot who walked slowly with short mincing steps. The change of gait so cramped our leg muscles that walking was agony.

Prisoners Fall Out.

Many prisoners began falling out now. They went down by twos and threes, some of them trying to rise. They were moaning. Others lay lifelessly in the road. I observed that the guards paid no attention to the fallen ones and wondered why. I soon had an explanation. There came the sharp crackle of rifle fire behind us.

Bringing up the rear of our contingent skulked a cleanup squad of murdering Jap buzzards. The American and Filipino soldiers who had fallen were sprawled darkly against the white of the road.

Members of the murder squad stooped over each huddled form. There was an orange flash in the darkness and a sharp report. The bodies were left where they lay, so that other prisoners who are marching behind us might see them. Orange flashes and thudding shots followed us thru the night, always just a few paces behind.

WAR PRISONER PROMOTION BILL HEARINGS URGED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Senator Chavez [D., N. M.] said today he had requested a military affairs subcommittee to hold hearings Feb. 9 and 10 on his bill providing for promotion of American prisoners of war in the Philippines.

Representatives of the Bataan relief association, which originated in New Mexico, and other associated groups from all over the country, will be in Washington on those dates, Chavez said.

They will be principally concerned, the senator said, over what can be done about Japanese atrocities, and also want to testify on the bill.

Hero Decorated

Hamilton Field, Cal., Feb. 4 (AP).—Maj. Gen. William E. Lynd, commander of the 4th air force, presented the distinguished service cross to Capt. Samuel C. Grashio today and told him "the march of death which began on Bataan is not ended; it goes on—to Tokio." Capt. Grashio was a victim of Japanese atrocities during the 12 months he was held prisoner prior to his escape from the Philippines.

The D. S. C. was presented on behalf of Gen. MacArthur, for "extraordinary heroism," but details of the heroism for which Grashio was cited remain undisclosed because of "unusual circumstances . . . secret in nature."

"Mankind will forever hold in horror those crimes to which you are one of the few living witnesses," Gen. Lynd told the captain. "The Japanese did those things to our men when the tide was running against us. Now the tide has turned."

OFFICER TELLS OF ESCAPE FROM THE PHILIPPINES

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 4 (AP).—It was just 10 months ago today that Comdr. Melvyn McCoy and nine other fighting Americans escaped after 11 months imprisonment during which they suffered and witnessed atrocious treatment by their Japanese captors in the Philippines.

Now the lean navy radio officer tells his story reluctantly, bit by bit, declining to give details of incidents which he defines as being "as foul as anything in history."

Planning Erases Fear.

Altho systematically starved so that weakness would handicap escape attempts, McCoy told the Seattle Times today that he and three companions risked death by stealing 133 chickens in three months to build up strength for the escape.

"The most important thing," he added, "is to have the will to escape. That's what makes the difference. Hundreds of men plan to escape, but very few make the actual attempt. You have to want it more than you want anything else.

"That's why fear never comes into it. By the time you've decided everything—all the risks—you aren't afraid any more."

Into Unexplored Country.

On last April 4 the 37 year old officer and nine other men slipped out of camp No. 2, a former penal colony 25 miles north of Davao City, southernmost city of the Philippines on Mindanao Island.

The territory they had to traverse was marked on maps as "unexplored."

"It's explored now," McCoy added succinctly.

"We left 'blind,' figuring we could steal a boat. Merely to escape into the jungle would be next to useless. Unless boat transportation can be stolen, there is no sense to it. . . .

"We left on Sunday," he continued. "On Monday they sent out scores of Japs to find us. They missed us, but they stumbled onto some Filipinos and shot them. Later we found heaps of bloody clothes where they'd been.

Praises Help of Natives.

"We never would have made a full escape if it hadn't been for the Philippine natives. Ninety-five per cent of them are loyal to the United States."

After several narrow escapes from searching parties and becoming lost in a swampy wilderness they finally regained a trail, only to find themselves following 40 Japanese soldiers who were hunting them. They followed until the trail forked, when they took the one not taken by the Japanese.

Finally they got away in a stolen boat on a dark night. Months later they reached Australia in a haggard condition.

Becomes More Religious.

Comdr. McCoy says his experience has made him more religious than he was.

"Grashio [Army Capt. Samuel Grashio of Spokane, Wash.] was the only Catholic among us. He was the boy we always asked to lead us in prayer. He knew his prayers, and that couldn't be said of all of us."

YANKS INVADE 3 MORE MARSHALL ISLES; CAPTURE 2

Casualties Still Light, Says Adm. Nimitz.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., PEARL HARBOR, Feb. 4 (AP).—Troops of the 7th army division landed on Ebeye and two other islands north of Kwajalein and occupied half of Ebeye despite enemy resistance.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported tonight that the Ebeye landing was unopposed but resistance was encountered inland from the beach. Adm. Nimitz also reported:

Two small islands between Kwajalein and Ebeye have been occupied against moderate opposition; Gugegwe and Loi islands, just north of Ebeye, are being shelled and bombed and the enemy is answering our fire; resistance on Kwajalein Island continues but progress is being made and our casualties continue moderate.

Seaplane Base at Ebeye.

Ebeye, 5,300 feet long and 700 feet wide, has two seaplane bases, a pier, and radio station. It is one of the important islands of Kwajalein atoll.

Virtually no news was received from Kwajalein Island, tho last night's report said the island was half occupied.

Kwajalein atoll has numerous islands, probably a third of which are occupied by United States forces, altho the figures have not been given. Namur and Roi are known to have been captured, Kwajalein and Ebeye are more than half occupied, and the navy has reported several islands adjacent to Namur were taken.

U. S. Military Rule Set Up.

There still is no indication the United States has suffered any naval losses and for the fourth successive day the Japs have had no planes in the air over the Marshalls, showing continued American dominance of both the air and the sea.

Just prior to the issuance of his latest official report, Adm. Nimitz in a proclamation set up a military government in the occupied portions of the Marshalls and "suspended" the powers of Emperor Hirohito in the first pre-war Japanese territory invaded by American forces.

Copies of the proclamation, expected to be a model for similar action when other Jap territory falls, were distributed in the wake of American marines and doughboys who invaded the Marshalls only last Monday. It was signed by Nimitz as military governor of the Marshalls.

Orders Friendly, but Firm.

While friendly in tone, the document was firm and gave the inhabitants to understand that orders must be obeyed promptly. There would be no interference, it said, in the normal, peaceful lives of civilians "so far as war necessities and their own behavior permit."

The announcement applies, at this time, only to Kwajalein atoll and its numerous islets which United States forces have overrun. It will be extended to other atolls and islands when they are taken over.

As battle-scarred American marines and doughboys drove remnants of the Nipponese from islands of the Kwajalein atoll, the American invasion fleet sailed into the lagoon to take advantage of its reef-protected waters. There was safety there from enemy submarines.

From his joint expeditionary force flagship, within the lagoon, Rear Adm. Richmond K. Turner said that on Tuesday, second day of the attack, he had ordered the fleet to anchor there.

The invasion's quick results were a happy surprise, Adm. Turner admitted. The operation rolled along on schedule—an indication that "every man was right in there doing his job."

Defenses Holding, Say Japs.

New York, Feb. 5 [Saturday]—(AP).—The Japanese Domei agency broadcast an imperial headquarters bulletin to North America today claiming Japanese garrisons on Roi and Kwajalein Islands in the Marshalls had "repulsed part of the enemy force which landed" and were now "firmly holding the defense sector."

Earlier the Tokio radio broadcast a version in Spanish, saying the Japanese were battling the "remaining" United States invasion forces on those two islands "with control of the situation having been assured."

'RICK' SAYS JAP GUERRILLAS WILL FIGHT 20 YEARS

New York, Feb. 4 [Special].—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker predicted at a war bond luncheon at the Bankers' club today that it will take 20 years to clear the Pacific islands of Japanese soldiers fighting as guerrillas after Japan is beaten.

He expressed the belief that Germany would not give up before next fall at the earliest and that Japan might hold out for one to five years after that. He said he expected the United States public debt would mount to 400 or 500 billion dollars, and that "sorrow will come to a million American homes" before the war ends.

The World War I flying ace, who is president of Eastern Air Lines, said Russia and America can prevent World War III, but that another war will be certain if Britain and the United States are aligned against Russia.

Argentina Ends Relations with Four Axis Satellites

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Feb. 4 (AP).—A government spokesman, announcing severance of relations with axis satellites, said tonight that espionage in Argentina had been carried out by the German embassy and a representative of Adolf Hitler. Japanese spying was directed by the Jap embassy. The government today cut diplomatic ties with Vichy France, Bulgaria, Rumania, and Hungary.

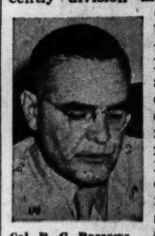
COL. RALPH BARROWS AWARDED MEDAL FOR CONSTRUCTION WORK



Col. R. G. Barrows.

Col. Ralph G. Barrows, until recently division army engineer in Chicago, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for his outstanding work in directing the production of war material, the office of Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, commanding officer of the 6th service command, announced yesterday.

The award was made for his work in the Detroit area where Col. Barrows served two years before coming to Chicago in April, 1943. The citation states in part that he carried out a tremendous military construction program, built air fields, and cantonments, and expanded industrial plants, that he built the MacArthur lock at Sault Ste. Marie, "completing in 13 months a structure which in normal times would have required three years." This achievement alone, the citation adds, made possible the maximum use of the Great Lakes cargo fleet to transport materials vital to war production.

Cal. Barrows was born in Cleveland, and graduated from West Point in 1916. He served overseas in the first World war. He left Chicago in October, and is now again overseas—this time in the Pacific area.

2 NAVY BOMBERS RIP JAP BASE IN KURILE ISLANDS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Flying from the Aleutian Islands, two navy bombers pounded the big Japanese naval base at Paramushiro in the North Pacific Kuriles, the navy announced today.

The raid on the enemy's largest base in the North Pacific was the 10th since late December. Results of the bombing were not observed, possibly due to heavy weather.

The navy reported no enemy planes were encountered by the two bombing craft and that both planes returned safely.

The attack was aimed at the southeastern coast of Paramushiro, which is just south of the Russian Kamchatka peninsula and the northernmost of the chain of islands in which the Japanese homeland is located.

Russian Subs Reported Off Swedish East Coast

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Feb. 4 (AP).—Two Russian submarines have been sighted in the Baltic sea southeast of Norrkoeping, Sweden, where soviet undersea craft were active in 1942, the Sydsvenska Dagbladet of Malmoe said today. This area is off the Swedish east coast.

7 BATAAN CLAN MEMBERS TALK AT BOND RALLY

Plea from seven members of the Bataan clan of Maywood, with sons and others dead or prisoners as the result of the Japanese capture of Bataan as the Pacific war opened, spurred the sale of war bonds at treasury center yesterday noon. Part of the ceremony was broadcast over W-G-N.

Mrs. Leonore Vertuno of Maywood, whose son, Corp. Russell, is missing in action on Bataan was near tears as she said she and others of the Bataan clan had suffered for two years, suspecting the facts that only now are being unfolded daily in THE TRIBUNE in the story of the Death March on Bataan—as told by the late Lt. Col. William E. Dyess.

Bonds Will Help Win.

Bonds will help defeat the Japs and release her son and many others, she said. "I hope you all will buy more bonds."

A. C. McArthur, clerk of the town of York and president of the Bataan clan, and Lt. John Peterson of the Maywood police, past president, took part in the radio program, in which they said 139 boys from Maywood and vicinity volunteered for the 192d tank battalion, company B in 1941, and were one of the first groups to be sent to the Philippines.

Peterson's son, Sgt. Robert, has been reported in a Japanese prison camp. Peterson asked greater bond purchases to help the Bataan boys who held off the Jap hordes while the allies prepared to fight.

McArthur estimated that 20 per cent of the Bataan clan's sons are dead, 30 per cent are missing in action, and 50 per cent are prisoners.

Over Halfway to Goal.

Sales in the Cook county bond drive reached $392,002,000 at the close of business Tuesday, it was announced yesterday, or 54 per cent of the $721,818,400 goal. Individual bond sales for the day were $4,342,000, bringing the total to $91,175,000.

Subscriptions of 1 billion 796 million dollars yesterday sent the national total to 10 billion 298 million, or 74 per cent of the 14 billion dollar goal. Rhode Island completed its 80 million quota and Alaska exceeded its 2 million goal yesterday.

Frank McNair, drive chairman, said indications are that sales are increasing, but this cannot be ascertained until figures for Wednesday and Thursday are tabulated.

For the first time in history, the wheat pit at the Board of Trade will offer a commodity other than grain, when McNair and others take over the rostrum in the grain pit at the close of grain business this noon and direct war bond sales.

SEES JAP DRIVE TO DIVIDE CHINA ON KEY RAIL LINE

CHUNGKING, China, Feb. 4 (AP).—The possibility that the Japanese are organizing a drive to occupy the whole route of the railways linking Peking, Hankow, and Canton, thus splitting China from north to south, was suggested today by a Chinese army spokesman. Success of such an operation, it was said, would provide the Japanese with an overland route to compensate in some part for shipping losses off China and keep open supply lines despite potential bombing of enemy bases east of the railways.

The spokesman said concentrating troops in North Honan province, apparently for a southward descent on the Peking-Hankow line and at Nanchang, the occupied capital of Kiangsi, possibly for a thrust west toward the Canton-Hankow route.

Chinese troops have been harrassing Jap communications on the Canton-Kowloon railway and have hampered traffic considerably.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—Examination of the White House visiting calendar for the years immediately before the war discloses a curious coincidence between the visits of titled and untitled European dignitaries and the failure of this government to send arms to the Philippines.

In 1936 Gen. MacArthur went to the islands, with the blessing of President Roosevelt, to put the Philippines in a state of defense against the day when they were to receive freedom.

MacArthur was confident the islands could be defended as he launched a 10 year program for creating a Filipino army. Adequate arms supplies in Corregidor, fortress of Manila bay, a fleet of torpedo boats and an air fleet of 50 Flying Fortresses, 250 attack planes and 500 pursuit ships would constitute an effective defense force, he and his officers agreed.

Eden Starts Campaign.

Scarcely had the 10 year program got under way than this government lost interest in it. At about that time a campaign to take the United States into European affairs was launched. The campaign was formally opened on Dec. 13, 1938, when dapper Anthony Eden, then out of the British government because he quit his post as foreign minister in protest against the appeasement policy of Prime Minister Chamberlain, came to the White House.

Eden visited the White House to prepare for the day when appeasement would be abandoned and Britain would look to Mr. Roosevelt to swing America to the aid of Britain and France. Eden went home and it is believed, conferred with Churchill, then also out of the government.

As the European situation became more troubled, Britain made the supreme bid for American support by sending King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth to this country in June, 1939. Altho the royal tour was heralded as a visit to Canada, that announcement deceived no one.

Seek Closer U. S.-British Ties.

It was generally recognized here and abroad that the most important portion of the trip was contained in the few days spent in the White House and at the President's family home at Hyde Park, N. Y. In the brief period the king and queen made a heavy effort to tie the United States closer to Britain.

Just after the royal visit the marquess of Lothian, who had been secretary to David Lloyd George, World war British premier, was sent to Washington as ambassador. The assignment of the reformed appeaser was the first break in a long succession of career diplomats.

He was welcomed by President Roosevelt two days before the outbreak of the war. Lothian envisioned the United States united to Britain as firmly or more firmly than the 48 states are knit together.

On a crisp day in September, 1940, a four stacker destroyer swung out of Boston harbor and headed for Halifax. It was the U. S. S. Buchanan, first of 50 destroyers given to Britain in return for the right to acquire a chain of bases from Newfoundland to British Guiana.

Join in Convoy Clamor.

Lothian received high praise for this effort. At the same time he was working for convoy of ships carrying supplies to Britain by the American navy. Convoy was proposed by Secretary of War Stimson two days before he was given his cabinet post. Secretary of the Navy Knox also joined in the convoy clamor.

But because Presidfent Roosevelt had once said convoys meant shooting and shooting meant war, the administration was slow to admit that the American navy was engaged in convoying war supplies to Britain. It was insisted that the American navy was patroling American waters, but officials refused to define the extent of American waters.

During the early part of 1941 the debate on convoying was still going on in the nation. It was charged that the navy was actually convoying, altho the administration insisted that the navy was merely patroling American waters.

U. S. Scope Extended.

On July 6, Mr. Roosevelt issued orders to the navy to convoy as far as Iceland, after it was disclosed American troops occupied Iceland. Convoying of British vessels by the American navy was then openly acknowledged.

Lothian died suddenly in December, 1940. On Jan. 21, 1941, in an unprecedented welcome, Mr. Roosevelt drove to Annapolis to greet Lothian's successor, Lord Halifax, another reformed appeaser, who made a dramatic entry into this country aboard the new British battleship George V. on what was described at the time as the greatest "shakedown cruise" in history.

On March 11, 1941, eight weeks after Halifax appeared in Chesapeake bay, the lend-lease act was passed and a large share of its 7 billion dollars was made available to Britain. The passage of this act was a triumph for Halifax, who had toiled mightily for the measure.

British Ships Get U. S. Aid.

Eight days after the passage of the lend-lease act the armed British merchant cruiser Canton limped into the Bethlehem shipyard in New York harbor to have battle damage repaired. She was followed by the battleship Malaya on April 9 and the battleship Resolution on April 22. On May 12, the badly battered aircraft carrier Illustrious made her way into the Norfolk navy yard.

Many British ships followed, including the battleships Rodney and Royal Sovereign. These received aid before the United States entered the war when neutrality called for seizure of the ships and internment of the crews.

Under Lothian and Halifax the British embassy became the most important propaganda office in the world as the center of the British effort to drag this country into the war. In this effort the security of the Philippines and the Pacific was minimized and the emphasis put on strengthening the British position even at the expense of American outposts.

U. S. Told "You're in War."

A parade of British notables swarmed over the capital in an invasion rivaling the proportions of that in 1812 when the British burned Washington. In 1940 Col. J. C. Wedgewood, Laborite member of parliament, told American audience, the European war is "your war" and "you are in it up to your necks."

Another propagandist, George Paisch, economist, was reported in the United States senate as having boasted, "I was responsible for getting the United States into the last war," and to have predicted, "I am going to get this country into this war."

During 1941 visiting Britons calling for American entry into the war included the duke of Kent, youngest brother of the king; Lord Beaverbrook, then minister of supply, and Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information. And in August, 1941, Britain played another trump card and arranged for a sea visit between the President and Churchill off Newfoundland. This visit produced the Atlantic Charter, which on American entry into the war was acknowledged by Mr. Roosevelt as the allied creed.

Royal Visitors Galore.

The British king and queen featured a galaxy of royal visits to Washington and Hyde Park, which began in April, 1939, a few months before George and Elizabeth arrived. At that time Crown Prince Olaf and Crown Princess Martha of Sweden made their first visit to this country.

The crown princess, who was once described by a member of the British embassy staff as "Briton's No. 1 agent," became a favorite of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The President visited her in her Maryland home, which is near his secret retreat. She was frequently a guest at Hyde Park and still is a constant White House guest.

In March, 1940, Otto Hapsburg, pretender to the nonexistent crown of Austria, paid his first visit to the White House. The President has since espoused a free Austria.

In July of the same year Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxemberg paid her first visit to the President, along with Prince Consort Felix and their children.

The earl of Athlone, uncle of the British king, visited Hyde Park Oct. 19, 1941. On Dec. 17, Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands paid the first of several visits.

Most of the royalty was back for at least one visit in 1941. Various ministers and cabinet officials also paid visits, calling for American arms as well as American entry into the war at a time when Philippine appeals for war supplies went unheeded.

CONGRESS GETS BILLS FOR SUPER SERVICE RANKS

BY LAURENCE BURD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—Bills proposing to create the super-ranks of "general of the armies" and "admiral of the fleet" were introduced in congress today by the chairman of the military and naval affairs committees of the two houses.

The army bill, offered by Rep. May [D., Ky.] and Sen. Reynolds [D., N. C.] would authorize the appointment by the President, with senate concurrence, of two generals of the armies. It contemplates that the titles would be bestowed on Gen. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Gen. Arnold, chief of the army air forces, but the bill names no names.

Aim After Equality.

The navy measure, sponsored by Rep. Vinson [D., Ga.] and Sen. Walsh [D., Mass.] provides for two admirals of the fleet. Slated for these posts, if the bill is enacted, are Adm. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet and chief of naval operations, and Adm. Leahy, chief of staff to President Roosevelt.

Both May and Vinson said in statements that the creation of the higher ranks should bring "more effective coördination" of the allied forces. They cited that British officers assigned to the allied joint chiefs of staff have higher ranks. The British members include John Dill, who carries the title of field marshal, and Percy Noble, who is an admiral of the British fleet.

The proposal to give American officers additional rank was first made last year and at that time was received coolly in congress. It was suggested then that Gen. Marshall be made a field marshall and Adm. King, admiral of the fleet.

Backed by Roosevelt.

The proposal, congressmen noted, would give our present war chiefs a higher rank than that held by any other American army or navy leader during war time. The plan has the indorsement of President Roosevelt.

There have been four "generals of the armies" in United States history, but each was given the designation in recognition of past services following the war in which he served. These were Generals Pershing, Ulysses S. Grant, William T. Sherman, and Philip Sheridan.

[Altho Pershing is in retirement, he is still on the active list. Thus, by seniority, he would still be the highest ranking officer in the services.]

In American naval history, there has been only one admiral of the fleet, George Dewey. The title ceased when he died in 1917.

SUICIDE HELD INSANE.

A coroner's jury yesterday held that Raymond K. Weller, 41 years old, 4642 North Hermitage avenue, was temporarily insane when he leaped Thursday from a window on the 11th floor of the building at 55 East Washington street.

SECRET MOVE BY U. S. TO RECOGNIZE BOLIVIA REPORTED AT LA PAZ

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Feb. 4 (AP).—United States Ambassador Pierre Boal was reported today to have conferred with President Gualberto Villarroel on reconsideration of nonrecognition of the Bolivian revolutionary government. The meeting was held with authorization of the United States state department, it was said.

One Bolivian source said the conference was favorable to the government's recognition hopes.

Boal was to leave yesterday for Washington, D. C., but delayed his departure.

HERE IS NAZI BULLETIN ON WAR IN RUSSIA

Following is the German Friday war bulletin on action in Russia as broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press:

"In the area of Nikopol [Dnieper bend] heavy fighting took place yesterday. South of the town all soviet attacks were foiled. Northwest of Nikopol German troops in counter-attacks inflicted grave losses on superior enemy forces.

"In the district between Kirovograd and Belaya Tserkov the enemy, after having brought up reën-forcements, continued his attacks without interruption.

"In the district south of the Pripet marshes several local soviet attacks were repulsed in bitter fighting. Between the Pripet and the Berezina rivers renewed enemy break-thru attempts supported by battleplanes were frustrated after heavy fluctuating fighting.

"In the area of Vitebsk [east of Lithuania] a second defense battle flared up in great strength. German troops repulsed attacks carried out by the enemy with numerous divisions, tanks, and battleplanes southeast and northwest of the town.

"North of Nevel, west of Novgorod and in the area of Narva German divisions achieved local successes in defensive and offensive fighting and destroyed a number of soviet tanks."

BISSELL TO BE NEW ARMY HEAD OF INTELLIGENCE

Washington, D. C., Feb 4 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Clayton L. Bissell will become chief of the army's military intelligence division on Feb. 29, the war department announced today.

Gen. Bissell.

Bissell, who was born at Kane, Pa., in 1896, will succeed Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, veteran of almost 44 years of army service. Strong will reach the statutory retirement age this year. Bissell, now a deputy chief of staff, will succeed to Strong's position as assistant chief of staff.

35 PLANE FLEET HOPS OCEAN ON 2 YEAR MISSION

Santa Monica, Cal., Feb. 4 (AP).—Douglas Aircraft corporation announced today that a fleet of 35 twin engine Douglas C-47 transports has successfully negotiated a 1,970 mile hop in the South Atlantic from Natal to Africa, carrying five tons of cargo each.

The announcement said the planes carried 1,623 gallons of fuel each, crews of four, and equipment to operate for two years. The planes grossed 35,500 pounds each, compared with Civil Aeronautical association's standard 25,200 pounds.

Assignments for the army flyers, who gathered at a Florida air field, were not opened until they had taken off. They were ordered to fly the South Atlantic to a base in Africa and then on to India to open up the Burma road air route into China.

SPAIN MUST BE TRUE NEUTRAL, F. D. R. ASSERTS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Calling the Spanish situation a headache, President Roosevelt defined allied policy toward Spain today as aimed at keeping that strategic country neutral in the true sense of the word. The President's remarks at his news conference presumably meant that the allies want to put an end to benefits Spain now grants Germany.

His remark, in answer to a question, came on the heels of the Spanish cabinet's announcement that Spain will maintain "strict neutrality."

The main problem for Spain at the moment is the allied blockade against her imports of oil from the Caribbean area. These were cut off last week, the state department said, "pending a reconsideration of relations" with Spain. The announcement of the move mentioned several measures Spain has failed to take to curtail aid to the Nazis.

MAIRZY DOATS—AND NETWORKS EAT UP MAIRZY

Jingle About Sharks Started It.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

As Archie of Duffy's would say, "Leave us face it." The nation is confronted with another tune as screwy as "The Hut Sut Song," or "The Music Goes Round and Round." It's "Mairzy Doats," and if that sounds goofy to you it means "Mares Eat Oats," and there is more stuff about lambs eating ivy. It will be on the Hit Parade tonight and it will get a glorified treatment by Paul Whiteman on the Hall of Fame tomorrow. It already has sold a half million copies and been recorded by a half dozen musical outfits.

The ubiquitous tune was put together by Milton Drake, Al Hoffman, and Jerry Livingston, the team which fabricated "Little Man You've Had a Busy Day" and many others. Drake's 4 year old daughter inspired the work with a nursery jingle starting "cowzy tweet and sowzy tweet, and liddle sharksy doisters" [you ought to be able to decode that]. Drake and his associates, unlike many another composer, did not steal the original from Neila. They just fashioned some more double talk in the same vein. Then they took it to the Miller Music company and waited. In fact they waited two years. Meanwhile it was sung at parties from coast to coast. Jack Robbins finally heard it, saw its possibilities, and got it into print.

George Olsen's band plugged it on W-G-N; Al Trace's crew in the east and Bill Days and the Sportsmen of the Groucho Marx troupe sent it on the way in Hollywood.

Days, who arrived here with the Marx crew the other day, had never been east before and feared the cold. He came outfitted with a new overcoat, galoshes, and other paraphernalia suitable to invade the Aleutians. He had it all on when he stepped off the train into Chicago balmy weather. But he hasn't climbed into it since.

The Marx show will be broadcast from Milwaukee over WBBM tonight. Next Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. Marx' company, with Screen Star Gene Tierney as guest, will appear at a War Bond Celebra-tea! at the Marshall Field tea rooms. A $100 war bond is the minimum that will get you in.

DRAKE OMITTED CHECK ON HELP, SAYS MANAGER

Clerk's Hoax on Marriage to Guest Related.

Ernst Kunz, manager of the Drake hotel, seeking to defend the Drake in connection with the mysterious murder of Mrs. Frank Starr Williams there on Jan. 19, admitted yesterday that the hotel had not investigated the pasts of its new employes to determine whether they had criminal records.

Mrs. Williams, wife of a Washington diplomatic attache, was shot in her eighth floor room by a fur clad woman. Her daughter, Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, was also fired upon, but was not hit.

Kunz, who will leave the Drake Feb. 15 for a job in Texas, said his departure was not prompted by the murder, but was arranged earlier. He formerly managed the Blackstone here and the Gotham in New York.

Didn't Know Clerk's Past.

Mrs. Ellen Bennett, an ex-gun girl, and paramour of a Drake guest, had worked at the Drake nearly 16 months, the last four at the clerk's desk, where she had access to room keys, Kunz said. He did not know of her notorious past. While working for the hotel she also was occupying a first floor suite with Patrick F. Murphy, posing as his wife. She had entered the Drake's employ as Mrs. Larkworthy, the name of the second of her three husbands. He was murdered in Milwaukee two years ago.

"When I was informed that our key clerk, whom he knew as Mrs. Larkworthy, was sharing the room of Mr. Murphy, and that they claimed to be married, I sent for her," explained Kunz. "She said that they were keeping their marriage a secret, pending the arrival home of her son, a marine corporal, who had fought on Guadalcanal.

"Then and there I had Mr. Murphy's registration card changed to include the registration of Mrs. Murphy."

Story Backed by Murphy.

Murphy, a brother of Francis B. Murphy, director of the state department of labor, first met Mrs. Bennett in September, and began living with her in November. Their relationship was exposed when hotel attendants entered his apartment to plan for decorating and found Mrs. Bennett there. She immediately explained she was Murphy's wife, and Murphy later told the same story. On Dec. 8, Mrs. Bennett divorced her third husband, Edward P. Welch.

Kunz contended that he never knew until the Williams murder that Mrs. Bennett, or Mrs. Larkworthy as he knew her, had a criminal record and that in 1939 she attempted to rob a Park Ridge dress shop with a gun, and was placed on probation.

Nor did he know, he said, that her sister, Mrs. H. R. Minck, better known as Miss Anna Valanis, also had a criminal record. Mrs. Minck, who had been held with Mrs. Bennett, was acquitted of murder in 1924, and convicted of burglary in 1943.

Employed by Predecessor.

"Mrs. Larkworthy was hired by the Drake in 1942, before I became manager there," went on Kunz. "There had never been any complaint against her until we found her in Mr. Murphy's room."

Kunz said the Drake had met difficulty in keeping up employe standards. Part of the trouble, he explained, is attributable to what he described as their domination by labor unions which in the past had been under hoodlum control.

The Drake currently employs 600 men and women. No system is maintained whereby their pasts are individually investigated. Fingerprints are not taken, but considerable reliance, Kunz said, is placed on past employment records of job seekers. In Mrs. Bennett's case she represented she had worked 10 years in one place.

"I assume that statement was checked," Kunz said, but he admitted he did not know that it had been.

No Suggestions on Solution.

Asked what he thought should be done to solve the murder mystery, Kunz said he had no suggestions—that he couldn't "think of a thing."

Meanwhile, Police Commissioner Allman was approached on the growing murder mystery.

"What are you doing to solve the Drake case?" he was asked.

"Everything that can possibly be done," replied Allman.

"What, for instance?" was the next query.

"I'm going to talk to Chief Sullivan," was the answer. Then the commissioner added he hadn't called in his detective chief, John L. Sullivan, recently because he didn't want to cause Sullivan to lose time on the case. Beyond that Allman, in office for 13 years, longer than any other Chicago police head, would not talk.

Commissioner Allman who never has professed to be a detective, seldom if ever has participated personally in a crime investigation.

Clews Allowed to Cool.

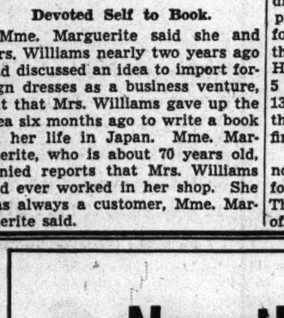
Much of the current investigation of the Williams murder has been carried on by Chicago avenue police, under Capt. Frank Reynolds, and Supervising Capt. John Ryan. Chief Sullivan has also done some work on the case.

The belief is not uncommon that police have bungled the case, largely because of a slow start, and also because of the prestige of the personalities and the hotels involved. Police work is described as being now in the stage it should have been a few hours after the shooting. The result has been cold clews, dimming memories, and confusion.

Yesterday Capt. Reynolds appealed to the friends and acquaintances of Mrs. Williams to give any information they might consider of value. One who talked to him was Mme. Marguerite Pick, a modiste at 127 East Chestnut street, who had made gowns for Mrs. Williams and her family for years.

Devoted Self to Book.

Mme. Marguerite said she and Mrs. Williams nearly two years ago had discussed an idea to import foreign dresses as a business venture, but that Mrs. Williams gave up the idea six months ago to write a book on her life in Japan. Mme. Marguerite, who is about 70 years old, denied reports that Mrs. Williams had ever worked in her shop. She was always a customer, Mme. Marguerite said.



Witnesses

IDENTIFIES GAS ROBBERS NEAR SITE OF MURDER

Edward Damiani, 28 years old, and Alvin Krause, 29, on trial for the poison gas murder of Miss Agnes Olsen in a currency exchange robbery July 3, were identified yesterday as two of the three men who used poison gas when they held up a drug store and currency exchange at 4755 Fullerton avenue a half hour after Miss Olsen had been gassed fatally.

Matthew Kulovitz.

A. S. Lindemann, the store owner, and his daughter, Mrs. Jane Wohlers, told the all-women jury hearing the case before Judge Harold G. Ward in Criminal court that Damiani carried the small tank from which the gas was sprayed.

Put Hose Under Window.

"That man," Lindemann said, pointing at Damiani, "stepped to the cage of our currency exchange concession and slipped a hose under the window. As he did this Krause, carrying a blue steel revolver, ordered the exchange owner, Hans Gerson, out of the cage. Then he stepped inside to empty the cash drawers. While this went on a third man guarded the front door."

Lindemann said Krause ordered the safe opened but that Gerson had hidden and could not be found.

"Krause had the tank now and he walked back and forth, spraying gas all over the place and demanding that we produce Gerson," Lindemann said.

Mrs. Wohlers testified that Krause stepped up to her and shouted: "Tell me where he is or I'll kill you." Then the men fled.

Dr. Charles Huber, a member of the staff at the Garfield Park Community hospital, testified that Miss Olsen died of pneumonia caused by breathing poison gas. Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's toxicologist, testified that examination of Miss Olsen's organs showed the presence of arsenic.

Hid Gas Cylinder.

The capture of Krause Aug. 4 was described by Matthew Kulovitz of 5452 Broadway street, honorably discharged marine, and Mrs. Louise King of 4875 Magnolia avenue.

Mrs. Mary Ryan testified she was living with Charles Young at 3222 Madison street in August when Damiani came to their room carrying a gas cylinder in a shopping bag. She said Young introduced her to Damiani and asserted the defendant left the tank in the room. Later she hid it in the room of a girl friend, she said.

When the state sought to introduce a petition filed by Asst. Public Defender Joseph Gannon in which it was contended that Damiani was insane, Atty. Harold Levy, representing Krause, asserted it bore out his contention that Krause was entitled to a separate trial. His motion for a mistrial was overruled.

ALLMAN OFFICE POLICE TESTIFY AT HEALY TRIAL

Two policemen from Commissioner Allman's office testified yesterday at the civil service trial of Capt. Walter Healy, suspended head of the Hyde Park district, who is charged with failing to keep proper records of gambling complaints.

Policeman Salvatore Giosh, one of the witnesses, testified he visited 15 addresses in the Hyde Park district July 10 and found only one place—1643 East 53d street—open for gambling. Two men arrested there were fined, he said. Policeman Harry Goelz testified that on Oct. 5 he and a squad raided a place at 1318 East 47th street, and arrested three men, one of whom later was fined.

The civil service commission announced it had overruled a motion for reinstatement filed by Capt. Thomas E. Connelly, suspended head of the Summerdale district.

ONLY ORDINARY EXPENSES EARN TAX DEDUCTIONS

Items Listed by U.S. Not Comprehensive.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The taxpayer who files his return on the long form, 1040, begins by listing the amounts received in 1943 as salary, wages, or other compensation for personal services, and from the total of such compensation he subtracts "deductible expenses." The net figure is item 1.

Instructions accompanying the 1040 form contain virtually no information as to what expenses are deductible in arriving at "compensation after deductible expenses."

In general, a deduction is allowed only for "ordinary and necessary" expenses incurred in connection with the taxpayer's employment. Typical expenses of this sort would be the cost of small tools having a useful life of a year or less and not supplied by the employer, union dues or membership fees in an organization providing "protective service to its members," traveling expenses in connection with the taxpayer's employment or business, and amounts spent by a salesman in entertaining customers for the purpose of obtaining business.

Travel Expense Barred.

The expenses of getting to and from work are not deductible, even by employes who must use their own automobiles because there is no other transportation.

Fees paid to an employment agency are deductible, but other expenses incurred in seeking a job are not. The cost of traveling or moving to a new place of employment is not deductible.

The cost of uniforms is deductible only if the wearing of the uniform is specifically required and if it does not take the place of ordinary clothing used in civil life. The cost of uniforms of nurses, surgeons, trainmen, policemen, and barbers is not deductible. This is true also of army and navy uniforms, including gold buttons, but the cost of certain additional items such as campaign bars, spurs, Sam Browne belts, swords, and epaulets, may be deducted.

Ball Players May Deduct.

Baseball players and jockeys may deduct the cost of their uniforms, and laundering expense as well. City firemen and policemen who must buy rubber coats and boots, may deduct the cost.

Allowable travel expense deductions in connection with a business or employment ordinarily include transportation, meals, and lodging, but not the cost of laundry, clothes pressing, and other expenses which would be incurred if the taxpayer stayed home. A person on a roving assignment or commission and maintaining no permanent home, is not allowed a deduction for meals and lodging expenses while traveling.

If the commissioner of internal revenue demands it, the taxpayer claiming a deduction for travel expense must submit a statement showing the nature of the business, the number of days spent away from home, the amount of expenses incident to meals and lodging, and other details.

Travel Expense Is Income.

Any amounts received as a travel allowance, expense account, or other reimbursement, must be included in wages or other compensation reported by the taxpayer.

Altho a salesman may deduct entertainment expenses, including the cost of theater tickets, dinners, and taxicab fares, this type of expense may not be deducted by an officer or employe whose contract of employment does not specifically require him to make such expenditures.

The cost of additional school work or training is not deductible even tho such training is essential to the work being performed or is specifically required in the contract of employment, as in the case of school teachers.

[Monday's article will discuss miscellaneous allowable deductions.]

ZUCKERMAN INQUEST IS PUT OFF TO ALLOW MORE INVESTIGATION

Identity of the three men who ambushed and slew Ben Zuckerman, prohibition era bootlegger, near his home at 4042 Wilcox street last Jan. 15, is still a mystery, police admitted yesterday.

At the request of Capt. Thomas Alcock of the Fillmore street police, an inquest into the death was continued until March 8 to give detectives more time to investigate.

Delving into the business and gambling activities of the 49 year old west side beer salesman has brought no results, Capt. Alcock said. His men are still seeking three men known to have been closeted with Zuckerman in his office at the Central-West Beer Distributors, Inc., 2408 South Pulaski road, until 40 minutes before his death.

3 Seized After Escape from Training School

Delbert Luke, formerly of South Bend, Ind.; Leslie Hert, 1151 Morgan street, Joliet, and George Debarge, 156th and Morgan streets, Markham, were back in the Illinois State Training School for Boys, near St. Charles, yesterday, after escaping in the fog on Thursday. Luke was seized by Sgt. J. H. Fitzgerald of the state highway police five miles west of St. Charles and the others were caught by Policeman George F. Dieter of West Chicago, near that city.

SURVIVES THREE SHIP SINKINGS; HOME ON LEAVE

Survivor of three ship sinkings, Lt. John Kennedy, who enlisted in the navy in July, 1941, and was sent to officer candidate school after being cited for bravery in the Java sea battle, is passing his leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Kennedy, 4654 Barry avenue.

Lt. Kennedy was a yeoman aboard the aircraft tender Langley when the ship was torpedoed and sunk, and aboard the tanker Pecos three days later when that ship also was sunk. After the Pecos was sunk Lt. Kennedy saved $50,000 of the ship's money by swimming with it tied about his neck until rescued. When the Pecos was attacked he manned a machine gun, altho not a gunner, and shot down a Jap plane.

After being commissioned an ensign, Kennedy was assigned to command a landing craft and headed the assault on Kiriwana island July 4, 1943. In a subsequent landing operation he lost some teeth from shrapnel fire and his craft was lost. Lt. Kennedy now is an instructor at a navy landing craft school.

The entire and absolute freedom of the press is essential to the preservation of government on the basis of a free Constitution. —Daniel Webster.

FREEDOM WINS.

The vote in the house in favor of the bill to give soldiers and sailors valid ballots next November was a victory, and a magnificent victory. It is a great pity that the senate has not shown itself equally zealous in defense of the Constitution.

Mr. Roosevelt had dared the members of the house to go on record in a roll call for or against his illegal scheme to corral the soldier vote. This challenge the house met. It rejected the President's proposal, 224 to 168, and then gave an overwhelming indorsement, 328 to 69, to the measure originated by Mr. Vursell of Illinois.

Under this plan the states are requested to accept postcard applications from soldiers for absentee ballots. Some of the states have already made the needed changes in their laws and the governors of almost all the others have indicated a willingness to do so. Legal state ballots will then be mailed to the applicants and will be returned to the states for counting, along with all the other ballots cast next November. The military authorities are directed to give absentee ballots priority in the air mail. To assure the widest distribution of ballots among the soldiers the bill authorizes local election officials to get the names of men in service from the draft boards and, where state laws permit, send ballots to these men, even tho no applications for them have been received. The states are to reduce the size and weight of the ballots to simplify the problem of handling the mail.

The method is simple, easily understood by all concerned, and unquestionably lawful. If it doesn't work the fault will lie, beyond all doubt, with the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, and the postmaster general. The overwhelming vote in the house should serve as a warning to these gentlemen that if they or any of them violate the clear instructions given to expedite the ballots impeachment will await them.

The patriotism of the men and women of both parties in the house who supported the Vursell bill cannot be sufficiently commended. They defeated the most dangerous, because the most insidious, attack on free government and constitutional liberty that this country has seen since the Civil war. If Mr. Roosevelt's scheme to disregard the clear mandate of the Constitution had been approved appalling consequences could hardly have been avoided.

For one thing, Mr. Roosevelt's scheme made highly probable a contested election in the midst of war, with all the confusion and passion that such a civil dispute would engender, and very small probability that it could be settled in time to provide a successor to Mr. Roosevelt on Jan. 20, 1945, when his term expires.

Other consequences would have been even more serious. All the protections of liberty, of property, and of life itself in the original Constitution, and in the Bill of Rights, are no more sacred and no more explicit than the provision for the election of a President by action of the states. Once the principle is established that the Constitution can be ignored when convenience seems to invite it, there is no limitation on the government and there remains no effective check on tyranny and dictatorship.

The threat presented by the President's scheme was particularly menacing because its intention was always transparently clear. Mr. Roosevelt wanted an unconstitutional federal ballot because he wanted to steal the election. If his plan had been adopted a precedent would have been established for future manipulations of the vote in the interest of the men and party in office. The blow was aimed at the free ballot and honest elections. It is impossible to exaggerate the debt that the people of this country owe to their patriotic representatives whose clear thinking exposed this stratagem and whose courage in the face of threats of reprisal defeated it by an overwhelming majority.

A MATTER OF TASTE.

Minister of Reconstruction Woolton, in the course of reminding the British Communists that conditions before the war couldn't have been as bad as they asserted they were and still have produced the present generation of British, did speak disparagingly of British cooking. He admitted that before the war England "had a badly balanced diet and about as bad cooking as could be found in the world." That, we may presume, makes it official.

Woolton, as minister of foods, did such a generally satisfactory job with British rationing that he was given the more important responsibilities of reconstruction, but his principal culinary claim to fame was a pastry land mine, or boat anchor, known as the Woolton pie. The full horrors of its construction are apparently a military secret, but enough information has leaked past the censor to indicate that its principal ingredient was carrots. Americans can be almost as thankful that they have been spared the Woolton pie as that they missed the blitz.

The noble minister, however, looks forward to Elysian delights when the trade lanes again are open. British cookery is not wholly horrible. The British country house breakfast, with a sideboard of scrambled eggs, bacon, kidneys, muffins, and marmalade awaiting the leisurely arrival of the guests, has a certain appeal to the American suburbanite who is in constant peril of putting the toast in the brief case and washing down the telephone bill with a half cup of scalding coffee as he pauses in midflight on his way to the 8:15. Simpson's roast beef is famous, tho perhaps not up to Swift and Armour's best, and among the foreign atmosphere restaurants of Chicago St. Hubert's grill and its mutton chops rank high. Provincial travelers in England have come home praising some of the cheeses they found and there are other items on the credit side of the ledger.

Woolton, however, is probably concerned about the brussels sprout and the cold boiled potato, which, in the culinary world, have supplanted the lion and unicorn on the British standard. It is one of the inexplicable traits of the British character that a nation whose sons thru the centuries have ranged the world more thoroly than those of any other country should have derived so little from their researches of foreign tables. It might be assumed that they left home to get away from the cooking, if it were not for the fact that they get to the ends of the earth, dress for dinner, and sit down to boiled vegetables, boiled meat, and cold boiled potatoes.

It obviously isn't that they know no better, so it must be that they prefer worse. Woolton suggests that the universities, whose present diet he condemns as extremely bad, should install some professors of nutrition to teach the relationship of food and health. Some chefs to teach the relationship of taste to food might prove more useful, and the really brilliant technological stroke would be the invention of a cook stove, subsidized out of the national treasury, which would perform other heating operations perfectly, but on which it would be very difficult to boil water.

ANYWAY, WE'VE SEEN THE WORST.

Whatever may be said of the federal tax bill as it approaches enactment, the income tax payers of the country can bless it for eliminating some of the worst features of the current, or Torquemada, tax return.

The relief comes too late for this year, and the conference committee seems to have undone some of the good work that was done in this direction by the senate. There is a possibility that the complications of the present form will prevent millions of taxpayers from making their March 15 payments for the simple reason that they can't figure out what they owe. But the country never again will face a return as bad as the present one. It couldn't and keep its revenue system from falling apart.

Many of the complications in the return were caused by the statutes and could be simplified only by congressional action. The forgiveness feature of the return, for example, will be washed up this year. Next year, except for a possible instalment payment computed this year, we won't have to wrestle with the gin rummy schedule on the back page of the return.

The conference committee had, at the last report, refused the senate's proposal to merge the victory and income taxes, which would have done away with the necessity of computing two kinds of taxable income, one for income tax and the other for victory tax. But some slight improvement, so far as simplicity is concerned, was made by eliminating the credit for earned income, which will eliminate one rather simple subschedule.

If simplification alone had been the purpose it would have been better to have got rid of the victory tax. There is a good argument for the credit for earned income, on the principle that the wage or salary earner, like machinery, is subject to depreciation as he grows older, and should receive preferential treatment over the taxpayer whose income is from invested and inherited capital.

By its interference with the original Ruml plan, a simple scheme as first presented to congress, the treasury is responsible for adding the final tortuous intricacies to the 1943 return. In many respects, however, the bureau of internal revenue, which drafts the returns, is not responsible for the complications. It has to follow the statutes that congress has written, often with the wholesome intention of relieving specific hardships.

The internal revenue authorities are responsible, however, for the instructions for filing that accompany the return. They might give some thought, during the next 11 months, to a set of instructions pitched to the level of the guy sweating in his shirt sleeves at the kitchen table, instead of that of the lawyer or accountant with a tax library at his elbow. Some attempt was made in that direction this year, but the product does not indicate that it was notably successful.

Editorial of the Day

SUNNY ITALY.

[Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.]

While browsing at a book sale the other day we were mildly shocked by an ironic title that popped up in the half price bin. "So, You're Going to Italy?" asked a battered volume, and proceeded to give inside tips on traveling there. In a trice we were taken back to the days when the trains ran on time in Italy and Il Duce was posing as the great modernizer of his country. Catering to the American tourist was a major industry thruout Europe then and the Fascisti had cut themselves in on the take. Remember how they fished for our dollars with lurid posters showing the Bay of Naples and the gliding gondolas of Venice? Always they promised sunshine and warm, lazy indolence.

If there is a sunny Italy today our soldiers have not found it. From the high heeled boot up past Naples they have been treated roughly by the weather. Months of persistent rain, of slogging ankle deep in mud, have been followed by blizzards, deep snowdrifts, and high winds. Some of the heaviest fighting took place on the iced ledges of rocky mountains 4,000 feet up in the sullen clouds. There has been precious little warmth, no sunshine, and definitely no indolence.

The contrast points again to the mistaken and pre-conceived notions most of us had about the European countries. We saw what we wanted to see, what fitted our purpose, and ignored the rest. Perhaps by now our eyesight has improved.

Test Your Horse Sense

By Dr. George W. Crane

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts five points. Then look for the correct answers on page 12.

1. A clearing house should make one think of which of these?
   Meat Railroads Banks Dry cleaning.
2. Which one of the following is weaned?
   Fish Chicken Bird Cat.
3. Raisins come from which one of these original sources?
   Plums Currants Grapes Cherries.
4. Which state is noted for its honorary colonels?
   New York Kentucky Tennessee Georgia.
5. Gettysburg is located in which of these states?
   Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, New York.
6. For centuries people have argued over the relative influences of heredity versus environment. Place a check mark under the appropriate heading below for each trait or characteristic that receives its major influence from one or the other of these headings. You deserve one point for each correct judgment.

	Heredity.	Environment.

MR. PEPYS FIGURES IT OUT.

5th Feb.—Finished my pencil work on Form 1040 last week-end, after a ten-hour struggle, thus getting the bad news and a case of eye-strain. Found a place where it said, "Was the rate of your salary or wages increased or decreased during your taxable year? Answer yes or no." I suppose Mr. Morgenthau meant to ask, "Was it changed?" but felt that simplicity would never do in a document full of $64 questions.

Now to go over the tangle again in search of errors in arithmetic, to which I am not immune, and copy the masterpiece in ink, and coax myself into a check-signing mood. All this will kill another week-end. After which I will figure out how much my time is worth per hour and multiply that amount by the large number of hours I have spent on Form 1040, and then consult a lawyer about ways and means of collecting the resulting sum, which will be a pretty penny, from Mr. Morgenthau. The government is solicitous about citizens who are compelled to work overtime, is it not? Well, then, this scheme sounds logical.

Shall add into my estimate of overtime a guess at hours spent thru the year in filing records, such as receipts, vouchers, bills, etc., for tax-returning purposes. Also a charge for shelf space in storing same. Since the income tax law, like many others in this burocratic era, requires all citizens to be bookkeepers, I will take the stand that my labor at this difficult profession should not go unrewarded.

Outside of Form 1040, did nothing thru the week but labor at my regular chores, read a detective story, and buy a new hat. The latter is my first since Pearl Harbor.

LISTED AS MISSING.

Winter
Within his vaulted hall
Holds solemn court.
A slanting sunbeam
Lightly plays upon his snowy locks,
Now throwing into stern relief
His chiseled features—
Then shadows them.
Captious and temperamental,
He greets his subjects variously,
As his uncertain mood dictates.
To some he softly whispers,
Gently smiles;
While others meet a cold, unyielding stare.
And here and there a luckless servitor
Is greeted with a tirade,
Merciless and harsh,
Rising to such violence
As makes the very rafters shout
And echo back his rage.
The long procession ends, the footsteps fade
And stillness reigns.
Then from his throne
King Winter quietly descends,
Shuts fast the door and softly turns the key,
While, clear above the hush,
A wood-thrush sings. Shandy Gaff.

THE FRUSTRATED FROG.

(A Brookfield Ballad.)

We never weep, or wonder why
A little froggy cannot fly;
We know the reason for such things
Is simply that he has no wings,
And there's no use improving him
For his intelligence is dim.
And yet we worry without end
About a neighbor or a friend,
And often make an awful fuss
Because they won't agree with us,
Tho life would be more fun by far
If we'd accept folks as they are!

Aren't Plastics Wonderful!

Yngvre, a chemist, has developed a substitute for shellac, one of the main ingredients of phonograph records. It is a plastic comprising a vinyl ester base composed of a conjoint polymer of a vinyl halide with a vinyl ester of an aliphatic acid and a mixed filler made of finely divided charcoal of vegetable origin and inorganic abrasive.

Anybody who can untangle a mess like that and keep a record from scratching is a genius. Hig.

ECZEMA AND BABY'S SKIN.

No single disease of infancy has brought forth more discussion than eczema. In general, physicians now believe that the disorder points to some trouble with metabolism [the digestion and absorption of foods.]

Three-quarters of the cases will represent skin responses to an irritant. If we are only keen enough to detect and eradicate the substance to which the child is sensitive, trouble will disappear.

What does the malady look like and how does it behave? First, we are confronted with inflammation. The affected areas itch, swell, and are redder than normal. Scales—composed of dead cells—form and, since they are of no use to the body, are shed. But, during the process, spaces in between may develop tiny blisters which will be filled with clear serum. Still later the fluid will become turbid [milky]. As these blebs break or dry up, crusting ensues and, whenever surface bacteria are present, pus will be encountered.

As we can understand, if the sites can be kept clean, healing will be more rapid. But when the lesions are infected [as from scratching], the tot may experience real distress. The avoidance of injury, then, will demand extreme care and only the softest materials should be used to cover the pillow and the bed.

We have long since learned that soap and water will only add to our difficulties. If cleansing must be undertaken, tar soapsuds may be used. Once every four or five days, the scales may be dislodged with heavy lather and as little water as possible. This has the advantage of softening and loosening the cuticle.

Thereafter the parts may be swabbed with dilute boric acid or normal salt solution. An excellent compress can be made by wringing out freshly ironed old linen, which may be kept in contact with the irritated patches for intervals of an hour or more. A better method perhaps is blotting or merely employing pressure. The best débris remover is cold cream which should be applied thickly, allowed to remain for five or 10 minutes, and removed by patting with soft tissue.

It is important to allay itching and ointments containing crude coal tar and zinc oxide are helpful. The family physician or specialist will prescribe the exact formula. Occasionally a bit of salicylic acid will help dissolve the hornlike flakes. Lanolin is rarely suggested because if the child is sensitive to wool he will also react to this preparation of wool fat.

After the acute stage has passed and the little one is on the mend, 2 or 3 per cent tannic acid, or a one to 5,000 solution of permanganate of potash may be utilized. While these compounds will bring about discoloration, they will—at the same time—be comforting.

But the number one job is to find the cause and, one after another, various elements will need to be discarded. We must think first of all of wool. This will mean the complete elimination of every particle from the clothing as well as the room. Cow's milk, or some other ingredient in the feeding mixture, may be at fault.

GOOSEFLESH.

M. L. E. writes: What is responsible for goose pimples in a child?

The cause is sensitivity to cold. Gradual exposure will establish immunity. There is nothing to the old notion that they come from rubbing goose grease on the chest.

It is like a dented eggshell. The caved-in portion may exert pressure upon the contents of the cranium—the brain.

LEAD POISONING.

M. R. writes: How is lead poisoning contracted?

REPLY.

Contact is rarely responsible as the skin is highly resistant. The most common sources are inhaling lead fumes or swallowing fine particles of dust.

Glad to Oblige, Mr. Gadley.

In poetree the name "Paree"
Fits nicely in the riming;
And "Baltimore" has mates galore
For iterative chiming.

"Kalamazoo" is easy, too;
"St. Louis" goes with "dewey,"
Or [mispronounced and slightly loused]
It almost goes with "Who is?"

"Duluth" and "truth," and "Rome" and "dome,"
Are friendly to the poet;
But if "Chicago" has a home
In verse, I do not know it.

There was an ass who had the brass
To rime it with "Wells-Fargo,"
But was he not most justly shot—
Pronouncing it "Chicargo"?

HALIFAX GADLEY II.

[We would point out to Mr. Gadley that, seeking to discourage further use of the sentence, "Don't you know there's a war going on," we recently compressed the horrible thing to its initial letters, "Dyktawgo." There's your long sought rime, Mr. Gadley, and much good may it do you!]

Office girl on a bus, telling a chum all about it: "Well, you know how hard it is to get supplies—rubber bands, paper clips, heavy envelopes, things like that. Well, know what I did — months and months ago? Well, I was smart. I bought boxes and boxes of clips and rubber bands, and I took 'em all home. Well, what happens? When I want a few hours off I tell the boss I've heard of a place where you can still get things if you know somebody there. I tell him I think I might get some bands or clips. So what does the boss do? Well, he tells me to put on my hat and get started. So I go to the movies and bring back a box of what he wants, and he pays for 'em, and he adds taxi money, too, because I tell him the place is away out on the west side—and that's the truth, too, because that's where I live."

THE PACIFIC WAR.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—What is wrong with our Republican leaders? Isn't there one senator or representative with courage enough to face the administration?

It is about time some one demanded action on a subject that the people have been fretting over for a long while. Such a leader can be certain of the public's backing.

It is necessary to send help to Britain and Russia, we all know, but must so much help go to them at the expense of Gen. MacArthur and his men and of our brave ally, China? It is a stale tale when they give us that unadulterated bunk that they can't get thru. We know that when a shipload of new banknotes can get thru certainly men, planes, ammunition, food, and medical supplies can get there, and certainly these are more necessary to get at the heart of Japan.

Suppose it does mean cutting down on our Russian and British supplies? Isn't this a more urgent need? I am sure most of us common folks feel that it is. A great many of us are wondering if there is one in Washington who is man enough to take the lead in this matter and really fight for immediate action. JAMES E. HALL.

SOLDIER VOTE INTENTIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—A few months ago administration leaders suggested that the national political conventions be held as late as September. Now they argue that the soldier's ballot must be a blank piece of paper because the conventions, when held in June and July, are too late to permit the service men and women to receive ballots with the names of the candidates for President and Vice President to be printed thereon. Either they did not originally intend to give the men and women in service overseas an opportunity to vote at all or they intended that the ballots should be voted before the political conventions were held.

ANTI-WILLKIE REPUBLICAN.

HIS HANDICAP.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Americans who plan to vote for a fourth term for Franklin Roosevelt, or who are considering doing so, should take note of the comment published in the British Yorkshire Post, that President Roosevelt "is handicapped by the American Constitution." Think that over and ask yourselves if you want while the boys serve their country to vote for a man whose personal ambitions—recognized by foreigners if not here—can apparently be realized only by destroying the Constitution which he swore to "preserve, protect, and defend." Think it over well and vote for America. F. J. B.

EXTERMINATE THEM.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Congressman Rogers' interview in THE TRIBUNE anent Japanese atrocities went to the core of the matter in just five words: "The Japs should be annihilated." That is the answer and further verbiage is superfluous. Japan and the Japanese people are a menace to civilization. Their atrocities thoroly justify the complete extinction of the race, and "world peace" will never be more than a dream as long as these barbarians are permitted to exist. They are untrustworthy, undependable, and utterly unprincipled, and if the time ever comes when they are permitted to sign a treaty of peace it will be done by them with mental reservation, and treated as a scrap of paper when, as, and if it becomes opportune for them to do so.

JAMES E. MADDOCK.

IT SHOULD BE THE RULE.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—I was called to the OPA recently regarding an error I had made in handling some property. Having read and heard so many criticisms regarding the OPA, I was all set for what I thought would be a very bad session.

Imagine my surprise to be treated courteously starting with the information desk thru to the final interview. Then I was helped in every way to straighten out my mistake. I also observed others were receiving the same kind and courteous treatments.

LEASE RENEWAL.

Chicago, Jan. 29 [Legal Friend of the People].—When we rented our apartment the landlord asked us to sign a lease. We didn't want to but he said he would like to have us sign one for at least one year. We complied and when the term expired he said nothing about a new lease. Are we now free to move at any time we wish? P. A.

Where a tenant under a lease for a definite term holds over beyond the term and the landlord accepts additional rent, these circumstances, in the absence of other circumstances showing a contrary intent on the part of the landlord, result in a renewal by implication so that neither party can terminate the tenancy during such renewal.

U. S. POSTOFFICE OUT OF 'RED' 1ST TIME IN 24 YEARS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Congress was advised today that the postoffice department made a profit of $1,332,849 last fiscal year, its first in 24 years, but currently is falling into the "red" again.

The news came from the house appropriations committee in recommending a $1,318,579,672 appropriation to finance the treasury and post office departments during the 12 months beginning next July 1.

This was divided $1,105,697,583 for the postoffice department and $212,882,089 for the treasury. In addition to this "new money," the committee recommended reappropriation of $3,491,500 for the treasury, representing money previously appropriated but not spent, and estimated the department would need $795,735,500 with which to make refunds of over-paid taxes.

Group Asks Increase.

The committee's recommendations represented an increase of $205,719,248 over the current year's funds for the postoffice department, and a $385,459,049 increase for the treasury. The treasury increase was accounted for by anticipated larger tax refunds due to the withholding system. The figures are $8,226,407 under the budget bureau's estimate of the postoffice department's needs and $14,557,311 below the bureau's request for the treasury.

The $1,332,849 profit for the postoffice department in the fiscal year ending last June 30 was disclosed in the committee's release of testimony it received from Frank Walker, postmaster general, in closed sessions.

Walker said the department took in $966,227,288 in postal revenues and spent $964,894,439. He said it also furnished $122,343,000 of free services, such as carrying mail for soldiers and government agencies. The profit compared with a deficit of $11,825,000 the previous year.

List Other Disclosures.

Among disclosures from the testimony of others were these:

It cost $91,000 for 27,074 soldiers and sailors to cast absentee ballots in the 1943 elections—an average of about $3.74. Congress appropriated $1,200,000 to finance absentee voting, but $1,109,000 was turned back to the treasury.

The reduction in the size of war savings bonds will save the government 5 millions in costs in 1945, and will save 3,374 tons of paper.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau reported that in the calendar year, up to the end of November, his department made net sales of 661 million dollars in gold.

Dr. George C. Hass, director of the treasury's division of research and statistics, told the committee: "We estimate income payments for the fiscal year 1944 at 147 billion dollars. We estimate that individuals will pay direct taxes to federal, state, and local governments of 22 billion dollars. That leaves 126 billion dollars.

BANK PRESIDENT, 4 OTHERS KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Elkins, W. Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—Short of fuel and trapped in a heavy overcast, an airplane bearing members of a prominent midwestern family to Washington, D. C., struck a hillside today, killing three men and two women.

The plane crashed four miles from Elkins a few moments after the municipal airport heard the pilot asking for landing instructions.

Identify Dead.

The dead were identified as:

Wilbur E. Hightower, president of the First National Bank and Trust company of Oklahoma City, former president of the Oklahoma City chamber of commerce and prominent civic leader; Mrs. John Robey Penn, his daughter; Roy Hunt, Oklahoma City, pilot; Mrs. Roy Hunt, the pilot's wife, and George Ruddy, Oklahoma City, co-pilot.

Hightower and his daughter had been summoned to Washington by the serious illness of Mrs. Frank Johnson, the banker's mother-in-law. They apparently were unaware that Mrs. Johnson had died this morning.

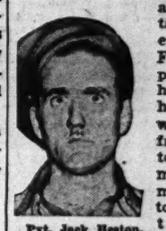
Northwestern U. Graduate.

Hightower was graduated in 1915 from Northwestern university, where he was an outstanding athlete and captained the football team in 1914.

The plane, owned by Leslie Fain of the Fain Drilling company, left Oklahoma City early in the morning. The ship was literally torn to pieces and strewn over an area of about 200 feet. One body was found beneath the shattered fuselake and the others were thrown clear.

On Jan. 15 an army bomber crashed 20 miles east of this mountain city, killing six of the crew of seven. Two weeks later an army cargo ship was wrecked 31 miles south of Elkins and two officers were killed.

NABBED FOR POSING AS OFFICER; ADMITS PASSING BAD CHECKS



Pvt. Jack Heston.

Pvt. Jack Heston, 23 years old, dressed in the uniform of an army air forces captain, was arrested yesterday by Fillmore street police who said he confessed he had been absent without leave from Camp Custer, Mich., for more than three months while he toured the country passing worthless checks.

Heston, who is married, was arrested by Detectives James Fitzgerald and Simon O'Grady near his home at 3325 5th avenue. They said he admitted leaving camp on a brief furlough from which he never returned. In the meantime, he traveled to the west coast and back.

Police said he admitted cashing checks ranging from $10 to $1,395. He purchased four or five cars with worthless checks, they said, in each case abandoning the old one in the city where he purchased a replacement.

LET ISLE OF MAN HAVE HOME RULE, PLEA TO BRITAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Isle of Man is tired of being tied to the British government's apron strings and has sent a deputation to the minister of home security, Herbert Morrison, to demand democratic home rule. The deputation consists of the timber merchant and speaker of the house of keys [Manx parliament], Joseph D. Qualtrough, and Eric W. Fargher, a member of the house of keys.

Morrison is being urged to transfer the powers now vested in Lt. Gov. Granville of the island to an executive committee.

NEW WAR BOND AD BILL VOTED BY HOUSE GROUP

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—Legislation to authorize the expenditure of 15 million dollars annually for paid government advertising of war bonds in smaller newspapers was approved today by the house ways and means committee.

The senate passed a similar bill by Sen. Bankhead [D., Ala.] last Nov. 12, but the legislation was pigeonholed in December by the house committee. Today's action reverses that stand.

The advertising would go to weekly, semi-weekly and tri-weekly newspapers and to daily newspapers in communities of 25,000 or less population. The treasury would be directed to purchase and pay for, during each fiscal year, beginning next July 1, "not less than 12½ million dollars nor more than 15 million dollars of advertising space" devoted to the sale of bonds.

The bill bears the name of Rep. Cannon [D., Mo.]. Rep. Mills [D., Ark.], a committee member, said the house would consider the measure as soon as the legislative program permits, probably within three weeks.

INDICT STATE ST. JEWELER AND 4 IN 'FENCE' PROBE

Indictments naming Jack Lebolt, a jeweler at 33 North State street, and four other merchants on charges of receiving stolen property, were returned yesterday before Chief Justice Benjamin Epstein in Criminal court.

Bonds of $5,000 each were fixed for Lebolt and the other merchants. They are Henry Singer, 24, of 4802 Bernard street, a furrier at 1223 South Halsted street; Ben Feinstein, 46, of 6330 North Oakley avenue, a jeweler at 808 Maxwell street; Alfred Paull, 30, of 1630 Lunt avenue, a furrier at 662 Maxwell street, and Edward Rosenbaum, 35, of 1535 South Avers avenue, a furrier at 608 Maxwell street.

Leo Weintraub, 22, of 3618 13th street, alleged leader of a band of nine juvenile thieves, was indicted on six charges of burglary and larceny and was held in $30,000 bond.

HEAVY WASTES POLLUTE RIVER, ENGINEER SAYS

A great part of the pollution and sluggishness of the Chicago river is due to the practice of some local industries of clogging the sewers with heavy wastes, and this pollution could be prevented by the installation of relatively inexpensive separators, Ald. Theron W. Merryman [45th], a member of the American Society of Sanitary Engineres, declared at a meeting yesterday of the city council committee on harbors, wharves, and bridges.

Among the offenders, he said, were stock yards plants, tanneries, metal treating plants, and other industries using surge tanks. He pointed out that much of the dumped stuff is poison and that it supports bacteria. He warned that a continuation of this practice could result in epidemics.

Ald. Arthur G. Lindell [9th] agreed with Merryman and said that the south branch of the river was in bad shape and that something must be done about it sooner or later. Complaints have reached him that sewers on the west side have been backing up due to the inability of the sluggish river to carry away wastes, he said.

SLAYER SEEKING SANITY TRIAL TO GET INSURANCE

J. Walter Tarpy, 42 years old, who opposed an examination by a state alienist before his conviction for murder in Criminal court on Jan. 28, yesterday agreed to undergo such a test by Dr. William Haines of the Cook county behavior clinic. A motion for a new trial was continued to Feb. 18 by Judge Harold G. Ward pending the examination.

Tarpy, a former insurance agent, was convicted of murdering his one-time friend and fellow worker, Walter G. Habenicht, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. His attorney, William Scott Stewart, reiterated claims made during the trial that Tarpy is insane and asserted that Tarpy's disability insurance policy, which would benefit his two children, would be voided if Tarpy is sent to prison under the conviction.

Stewart requested that Tarpy be declared insane and committed to an institution, in which case the insurance would be effective.

Saves $126,800

A device which will save $126,800 and 15,000 man hours a year in the 6th service command alone has been invented in the quartermaster shop at Fort Sheridan. The machine, a canteen reconditioner, takes dents and other defects out of water canteens used by soldiers. The invention of Maj. Ernst Schuelke, post ordnance officer, repairs 1,000 canteens a day, using air and water pressure to straighten battered sides. The soldiers of this service command damage 200,000 canteens a year, 90 per cent of which can be repaired by the new machine. They cost 92 cents each new.

USE MOTHBALLS IN DRIVE AGAINST SPARROW PESTS

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 4 (AP).—Mothballs, water, and glue will be used in a dawn attack tomorrow against thousands of starlings and sparrows roosting in Springfield's business area.

Harry Eielson, city health and safety commissioner, said fire hoses washed some of the birds away permanently last week, but this time he's going to have mothballs hung in sacks on nearby guy wires and glue put on ledges that are favorite perches of the pests.

The methods were suggested to him as sure-fire remedies to either trap the birds or drive them away because of the mothball odor.

MAID GETS $1,500 LOOT.

A Negro maid he hired two weeks ago disappeared yesterday afternoon with $1,500 worth of clothing and jewelry, Henry Kalcheim, an attorney, 5325 Harper avenue, reported last night to police.

DEWEY GRANTS LEPKE REPRIEVE UNTIL MARCH 2

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today granted a fourth reprieve to Louis [Lepke] Buchalter, convicted head of Murder, Inc., and two associates, delaying until March 2 their execution, which had been scheduled for next Thursday.

The announcement, made by Charles Breitel, the governor's counsel, said:

"The executions in the case of Louis Buchalter, Emanuel Weiss, and Louis Capone are presently set for the week beginning Feb. 7, 1944.

"The chief judge of the Court of Appeals [Irving Lehman] has signed an order to show cause in the case, returnable Feb. 14, 1944, on the question of whether a reargument of the appeal should be had. Such motion may not be decided until Feb. 22. Accordingly the governor has granted a further respite. . . ."

Lepke, Weiss, and Capone were sentenced in 1941 to die for the killing of Samuel Rosen, Brooklyn candy store owner, in 1936.

DIES IN CHAIR; NOTE TELLS OF HIDDEN MONEY

Miss Marie Wassman, 84 years old, had little faith in banks and less in humans after a gang of boys robbed her one night, so she burled her extra funds in the back yard of her home at 1446 North Park avenue. But when she felt her death was near she wrote a note giving directions for finding the cache.

Yesterday Miss Hedwig Pueschel of 1831 Sheffield avenue called at Miss Wassman's home as she did daily and found her dead in a chair. Beside the body was a note with directions that the May 31 entry in her diary should be consulted. This entry read that "I feel that death is at my side to take me," and said that her money would be found in a mustard jar in the yard. It also bequeathed her home to the city "as payment for old age benefits."

Army Flyer Reported Lost in Burma Theater

Lt. Craig M. Jones, 22 years old, an army air forces transport pilot in the Burma-India region, has been missing in action since Jan. 13, friends here learned yesterday. The war department notified his mother, Mrs. Ruth A. Jones, of Cleveland, O., who formerly lived at 5808 Erie street. His wife, Mrs. Shirley Jones, lives in Flint, Mich.

Tells of Shower

[TRIBUNE Photo.]
MRS. FLORENCE MANEWAL.

A cold shower may be invigorating, but it's not helpful to love, Judge Robert J. Dunne of the Circuit court, gathered yesterday in awarding a divorce to Mrs. Florence E. Manewal, 26 years old, 5150 Pensacola avenue, from her husband, Robert Manewal, 30, a war plant inspector.

Mrs. Manewal, a model, charged her husband with cruelty, and one incident concerned a cold shower. During a tantrum, she said in answer to questions by her lawyer, Harry X. Cole, Manewal dragged her fully clothed under a cold shower, then tore her clothes off.

Judge Dunne awarded Mrs. Manewal custody of her son, John, 2, and $12.50 a week for his support. She also was given $400 in war bonds. The Manewals were married June 11, 1937, and separated Jan. 20 last. He lives at 5057 Agatite avenue.

PLANE ADDS 8 PASSENGERS ON TRIP OVER SEA

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4 (AP).—An air transport command plane arrived in Miami yesterday with eight passengers that were not aboard when the ship took off for an Atlantic crossing.

At 10,000 feet just south of the equator, Tilly, an English terrior born in a maharajah's palace, gave birth to nine puppies.

The ship's radio announced the event. When a South American port was reached, an army nurse helped Tilly's owner, Maj. John H. Grindlay of the army medical corps, care for the puppies. The nurse kept one. The remaining eight came on to Miami.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with queries.]

M. S. A. writes: "My son, age 18, at present is classified 2-A which will expire Feb. 26. He is a pre-medical student and has his 'acceptance' to a medical school for the class of October, 1944. Under these circumstances, is he eligible for a renewal of his 2-A classification?"

ANSWER: You do not make clear just how far along your son is in his pre-medical training. If he has completed this training and is now just "marking time" waiting for the October class, he cannot be deferred because the amended activity and occupational bulletin 33-6 states: "An undergraduate student . . . who will graduate after July 1, 1944, should be considered for occupational deferment if he is a full time student in good standing. . . ." If he has completed his pre-medical training, he is no longer a full time student in training and preparation, and he will not become a full time student in his medical training until after October. If your son does not complete his pre-medical training until just before entering medical school this fall, he may be considered for student deferment if he meets the requirements set out in A. O. B. 33-6, paragraph 2, section B.

B. L. A. asks: "Was the bill to grant furloughs to navy men overseas passed which would give them a furlough after 14 months?"

ANSWER: Furloughs are not a subject of congressional legislation. The navy announced a general policy of giving furloughs when possible after 18 months of hazardous sea duty or overseas duty.

H. A. B. writes: "On Friday I was given my pre-induction physical and 'accepted' for service in the navy. My wife and I own, in joint tenancy, a two story building with a two car garage. We live in one flat and rent the other and both parts of the garage are rented. I have a mortgage on this property on which I pay $38 per month. Can I defer all payments on this mortgage even tho I have this $33 income from the flat and garage? Can the taxes be deferred without it being necessary to pay the penalty when I am released from service?"

ANSWER: The soldiers and sailors civil relief act stipulates that before relief from such contracts may be granted, the court must be satisfied that the ability of the person to comply with the terms of the contract is materially impaired by reason of his service. As to whether your wife [if she has an income independent of your earnings] would be liable would depend upon the wording of the mortgage contract and whose name the title is in, etc. It is suggested you consult with a state, county, or city bar association committee on war work of the state wherein the property is located. We have a digest of this legislation which we will be glad to send on request accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope.

INDICT 2 LIQUOR FIRMS IN BLACK MARKET ATTACK

Jack Guzik's Brother, 13 Individuals Named.

In the first major crackdown by the government on the liquor black market two federal grand juries returned eight indictments here yesterday naming two firms and 14 individuals. One of the defendants is Joseph Goodwin, a brother of Jack Guzik, the Capone gambling mobster. The indictments were returned before Judge John P. Barnes.

Four of the indictments were directed against the 70 year old firm of F. W. Koenecke & Sons, 13136 South Western avenue, Blue Island, and its officials and agents. The bills charge the sale of whisky at wholesale prices in excess of those fixed by the office of price administration.

Three Brothers Defendants.

Executives of the company named as defendants are three brothers: Walter H. Koenecke, 2341 Prairie street, Blue Island; Alfred L. Koenecke, 8353 St. Lawrence avenue, and Robert F. Koenecke, 13032 Greenwood avenue, Blue Island.

The other defendants who were said to have acted as "intermediaries" for the firm are: Martin Tlkulski, 7659 Phillips avenue, former liquor store owner; David Greenberg of the Somerset apartments, 5009 Sheridan road, a former salesman, and Robert E. Lee Sr., 7950 Crandon avenue, a liquor salesman for another company.

Assistant United States Attorneys Earle J. Hurley and Maurice J. Walsh said investigation by the OPA and the alcohol tax unit disclosed that the company had entered purchases in its invoices at ceiling prices while demanding "side payments" of from $15 to $30 a case over the maximum prices.

Conspiracy, Perjury Charged.

Charges of conspiracy, price violations, and perjury were contained in the second series of indictments which was returned by the November grand jury. Both it and the December grand jury had investigated the false liquor shortage and black market.

These bills named John Roesing & Co., 2101 South Wabash avenue; John Roesing, 2920 Commonwealth avenue, its president; his son, Robert B. Roesing, 32, of 2300 Lincoln Park West, executive officer; William Gardner, 37, of 820 South Park avenue, Hinsdale, vice president; Frank Wabich, 32, of 5708 South Justine street, sales manager; Samuel Friedman, 3847 West 13th street, a salesman; Sidney A. Lawrence, 2914 Rosemont avenue, a salesman; Joseph Goodwin, Guzik's brother, a former salesman, and Henry J. Beutel, assistant cashier of the South East National Bank of Chicago, 1180 East 63d street.

These defendants, with the exception of Beutel, were charged with conspiracy to make false statements to the alcohol tax unit and with selling whisky in wholesale quantities [over five gallons] to retailers at prices in excess of the OPA maximums.

Beutel was indicted for perjury for statements which he made Dec. 2 before the grand jury when he said he had purchased 337 cases of whisky from the Roesing company on July 14, 1943, paying $13,000 of his own money.

INSTALMENT XXIV.

ELLIOT QUESTIONED.

"What do you want to talk to me about, Mr. Wray?"

"I am wondering how much you know."

"Not so much as I should like to know, Mr. Wray. Perhaps you will add to my knowledge. Will you mind if I ask you some questions?"

"Not at all."

"Well, then, Mr. Wray—you do not live in Birleton?"

"No."

"And you are engaged on confidential work in connection with airplane construction?"

"Yes."

"These things are common knowledge? And so is the fact that your present visit to Birleton was connected with work being done for the government at the Paradine-Moffat works?"

"Had you expected to dine here last night?"

"No."

"Will you tell me what occasioned the change in your plans?"

"Mr. Paradine rang me up at 7 o'clock. He said he wanted to see me on a matter of business."

"And when you came out here he insisted on your remaining for dinner and staying the night. May I ask how you had intended to spend the evening?"

"I was dining with Mr. Moffat, Mr. Paradine's partner."

Miss Silver said, "Dear me——," and then, "I am going to ask you a question which you may not wish to answer. Miss Pennington and Mr. Mark Paradine have given me an account of what took place at the dinner table last night. It must have been a trying experience, especially for the guilty person. I understand that Mr. Paradine actually used that expression, 'the guilty person,' but beyond stating that the family interests had been betrayed he gave no indication of the nature of this betrayal. I should just like to ask you whether you brought any papers or plans with you on that visit. I feel sure that you must have done so."

"Naturally."

"You had entrusted these papers to Mr. Paradine?"

"What makes you think that?"

"I feel sure of it, Mr. Wray. I also feel sure that when Mr. Paradine summoned you at 7 o'clock last night it was in order to inform you that these papers, or some of them, were missing."

Elliot jerked back his chair and sprang up.

"Who told you that? Was it Mark?"

"I do not imagine that Mr. Mark Paradine knows."

"Then it was Lydia—Lydia told you."

"I am quite sure that Miss Pennington does not know either."

"Then how do you know?"

"The evidence told me, Mr. Wray. You will forgive me if I touch on what may be painful. There had been a breach between you and Mr. Paradine's family for a year. Your dining and spending the night here could only mean one of two things—a reconciliation, or an emergency of such gravity as to cause all other considerations to be set on one side. There was no evidence of a reconciliation. Your appearance in the drawing room just before dinner startled every one. It was obviously quite unexpected even by Miss Paradine—even, pardon me, by Mrs. Wray. I had therefore to consider the other alternative, an emergency so sudden and urgent that Mr. Paradine himself canceled your dinner engagement and was able to induce you to cooperate in a plan which necessitated your joining the party at dinner and staying the night. Taken in conjunction with his remark about betrayal and his statement that he knew who the guilty person was, this led me to the conclusion that Mr. Paradine had missed some important paper or papers, that he knew who had taken them, and that he believed he could put sufficient pressure on this person to secure their return. On this assumption your acquiescence and the scene at the dinner table fall naturally into place. A very serious motive is also supplied for the murder of the person who possessed such damaging information."

"You've been about a quarter of an hour in the house. Are you telling me that you've found this out for yourself? I'm sorry, but I don't believe it. I want to know what Mark and Lydia have been telling you. I don't want to be offensive, but you must see that if either of them knew that my blueprints had been taken, well, it points to one of them as the thief. Only three people knew that the prints were missing—the person who took them, Mr. Paradine, and myself."

"Very well put, Mr. Wray. I can, however, assure you that neither Mr. Mark nor Miss Lydia so much as hinted at the possibility that Mr. Paradine's accusation had anything to do with your papers. Miss Lydia merely informed me that there had been a serious breach between you and the Paradine family, but that your business relations were not affected. Mr. Mark added that your present visit was on government business of a confidential nature. My deductions were drawn from these and a number of other small facts. I gather that they are correct."

"O, yes, they are correct."

Miss Silver opened the green copybook and wrote in it.

"Mr. Paradine told you that he knew who had taken the papers?"

"Yes."

"Did he give you any indication of who that person was?"

"No, he didn't."

"Mr. Wray, you can help me here. You are shrewd and observant. I want to know the impression made on you at the time by his voice, his look, his manner."

"It wasn't Mr. Paradine's way to show his feelings."

"Still, you might have received some impression, and you must subsequently have gone over that impression in your own mind. The discovery of the loss must have been a shock to Mr. Paradine."

"He was in very good spirits. He told me I'd got to stay and told me I should have my papers back in the morning. Since you know so much, I may as well tell you that he was perfectly right—I did get them back. They were here on his table. I took them, but I didn't mean to say anything about it. I thought

Symphony and Art Openings Bring Out Fashionable Crowd

BY JUDITH CASS.

AN AUDIENCE that was treading on air after hearing Vladimir Horowitz with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon poured out of Orchestra hall and on to a number of gatherings where the pianist more than held his own as a topic of conversation in the face of competition from art shows and tea-dancing. A mild, sunny day didn't bring out as many spring clothes as might have been expected, but there was a hint of April showers and May flowers here and there.

In Mrs. Horowitz's costume it was the fresh pink of her tiny skull cap, covered with layers of starched black net, that heralded warmer days to come. She heard her husband from a seat next to Mrs. Maurice Cottle and the latter's two youngsters. Mrs. William H. Mitchell's baby bonnet of pristine white with ribbon rosettes over each ear; Mrs. William Hunt's frothy pink flowered chapeau, and Mrs. John P. Wilson's feather hat of flamingo color were other bright spots in the crowded hall.

Mrs. Donald F. McPherson took time out from her duties at the treasury department to hear the famed pianist. She just has welcomed home her son-in-law and daughter, Lt. and Mrs. Willard N. Drown Jr., who with their baby are here to take their furniture out of storage and send it to St. Louis, Lt. Drown's new navy post.

A tiny bunch of violets to match her wool suit and flat little bandeau hat was pinned to the mink coat Mrs. George W. Merck Jr. wore to the Roullier art galleries, where a self portrait by her stepfather, Edward H. Bennett, is included in the exhibition that opened yesterday for the benefit of France Forever. Lt. [j. g.] Merck, on leave from the Pacific area, was his wife's proud escort at the galleries. Already sold to the Walter Brewsters was Salcia Bahnc's portrait. Mrs. Brewster heads the Chicago chapter of France Forever.

Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed in a black suit and enchanting turban hat of flaming scarlet with a lapel piece shaped like the turban to match, went from the concert to the France Forever party and on to the Arts club, to the opening of an exhibition by Le Corbusier. Mrs. Winterbotham Badger, who was responsible for the club's tea table, used artificial blue flowers spiked with shasta daisies in large bowls of iridescent blue to create a stunning effect. Mrs. Edward A. Leight and her guest, Mrs. Charles Frederick Mather-Smith of Oakland, Fla., who is here visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Chester Fischbeck; Mrs. Jere Patterson, who had come from the concert; Mrs. Paul Butler, Mrs. Arthur G. Cable, and Miss Emily Coest were a few of those at the club.

On the Calendar.

A large attendance is expected by the Chicago and North Shore Vassar clubs at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today at the Woman's Athletic club at which Prof. Mabel Newcomer, chairman of the department of economics and sociology at Vassar, will speak on "Taxes and Inflation," her special field. Mrs. Harold Pulsifer, president of the Chicago Vassar club, will preside. At the speaker's table with her and Prof. Newcomer will be Kenneth Horan, president of the North Shore club; presidents of other Chicago alumnae clubs, who have been invited to meet Miss Newcomer, and officers and committee members of the Vassar alumnae groups. Mrs. Robert Hosmer Morse Jr. is in charge of luncheon arrangements.

Self-Portraits Exhibit Clever and Amusing

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

An amusing and clever exhibition opened yesterday at the Albert Roullier Art galleries in the Fine Arts building under the auspices of France Forever. The name of the exhibit is "Chicago Artists See Themselves" and the self-portraits run the gamut of representation from the cartoon of John T. McCutcheon to the stunning oil of Edgar Miller.

Probably Mr. Miller's canvas is the finest portrait in the room, tho it is difficult to play favorites with the intriguing little scrap of perfection in pictures staring you in the face as you eye the amazingly detailed and imaginative conception of Julia Thecla.

Salcia Bahnc has a delightful sketch of herself, just the face, but beautifully done. Jeanne De Fauw shows a sensitive and lovely likeness. Maude Phelps Hutchins, in a jaunty, dancing mood, interprets herself as a pixie complex, and Francis Chapin submits a dashing caricature in rich greens. Arthur Heun and John Root turned in excellent likenesses, and both Kenneth Shopen and Rainey Bennett saw themselves as little figures in a larger composition. Kenneth Shopen was particularly successful with his background; waterfall and woodlot make a grand stage for his lithe figure wielding a brush.

Clara MacGowan has one of the nicest pictures in the exhibit, an excellent likeness and a setting of her favorite spots and places, with Paris jogging the elbow of Jaspar Park. Beatrice Levy submits a thoughtful portrait, well done, and Laura Van Pappelendam gives you herself with a cunning smile and hat that combine Vera Vague and the apple women of old London.

The Arts club opened a new exhibition yesterday to continue thru February. Paintings, drawings, and architecture by Le Corbusier make up the show which, if the truth must be told, is not particularly interesting or appealing. The paintings are chiefly of large women gifted with masses of superfluous flesh on calf, thigh, shoulders, and chest. Infrequently the theme is altered to give place to an abstraction; often the abstraction includes the female. There is neither good drawing nor good color to relieve the monotony of subject and manner.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Little Miss Patty Gail Blanchar, who is 3 years old, is too young to go to the 8th annual Friends of Orphans party on March 1 at the Edgewater Beach hotel, but her mother, Mrs. Carroll H. Blanchar, will be there as a member of the organization. The program for the benefit includes brunch at 11:30 a. m., a fashion show, a book review by Kathryn Turney Garten, and bridge.

Girl Scout Executives Set April 12 as Date for Next Conference

Great Lakes regional executives and professional workers of the National Girl Scout association, in session for the third day yesterday in the La Salle hotel, set their next regional conference for April 12 thru 14. The question of financing the Girl Scout program will be the theme of the April meeting, which also will be held in the La Salle hotel.

Yesterday's conference program consisted of workshops dealing with the youth leaders' local problems in regard to outdoor activities and camping for children under their supervision. Miss Helen Ross, president of the Institute of Psychoanalysis, will speak at the closing session of the conference tomorrow.

Mrs. Melvin Binks Heads Infant Welfare Auxiliary

The Oak Park and River Forest Infant Welfare auxiliary will be headed during the coming year by Mrs. Melvin J. Binks. Serving on the board under her will be Mrs. Dwight L. Merrell, Mrs. Edward S. Christiansen, Mrs. Robert D. Follett, Mrs. William T. Goss, Mrs. Robert Horton, Mrs. Earle J. Collins, Mrs. Arthur E. Beeman, and Mrs. Herbert O. Krueger. Mrs. William Dewey Sawler will be publicity chairman, assisted by Mrs. L. W. McNamara. The junior auxiliary is conducting a war bond drive.

Thru the Looking Glass

War or no war ladies love their valentines. Love them more than ever in these times, as a matter of fact, because they are an effectionate arrow piercing the distances that separate so many of us.

For the last several years there's been a swing in valentines toward what all the ad writers couldn't resist calling "scentiments," the fragrant perfumes, colognes, sachets, and even soaps that, as much as any froth of lace and ribbon and mushy verse ever did, make the feminine heart beat faster. Women adore the valentine that tells them that they're beautiful as well as beloved. and the beauty trifles tell them just that.

This year, because the beauty houses are making a serious effort to conserve paper, you'll find few of the glamor-gifts in fancy packaging appropriate to Cupid's day. But the gift itself is undeniably appropriate. Your pocketbook and the lady's taste in such things can be your guide in the selection.

A little bottle of perfume, for example, is a valentine that will serve its romantic purpose for more than one day. It can give her delightful remembrance for months. The same is true of sachets, and in these, by the way, you'll find lots of the froufrou you might think a valentine should have. Little pillows or puffs of rayon satin, in a heavenly fragrance, have a valentine look just in themselves and because they're the sort of thing she tucks among her precious possessions have the keepsake quality too.

Your valentine shopping, we know, is a simple business if you shop for glamor-gifts and, feminine tastes being what they are, a successful one.

Six Schools Collect Quotas of Fund for Lincoln Manuscript

Six city high schools yesterday were reported to have collected their quotas of a fund with which it is planned Illinois school children shall buy a copy of Lincoln's Gettysburg address. The copy is to be donated to the state. The purchase price is $60,000. A drive last fall fell short of the goal. The campaign is to be intensified here beginning Monday. The quota is 5 cents per pupil.

South Shore and Sullivan high schools were reported slightly over their quotas of $104 and $195 yesterday. Four schools had reached their quotas: Amundsen, $108.65; Farragut, $98; Gage Park, $105; and Lindblom, $173. Mayfair elementary school had exceeded its quota of $30 and 21 other elementary schools were near theirs.

Emerson House Party Recalls Gatherings of 25 Years Ago

BY HARRIETT PRIBBLE.

FOR the almost forgotten charms of tea dancing, for the uniforms of men on leave from army and navy posts, and for the long fringe on Mrs. Movius Palmer's gown, reminiscent of the fashions of 25 years ago, the Emerson House party yesterday at the Ambassador East brought back memories of World War I. It was an afternoon that included soft music, candlelight at twilight, and pleasant visits around the little tables in the three rooms, plus a good dash of 1944 modernity.

Invitation to the benefit, printed in green on white satin ribbon, set the starting hour at 5 p. m., but when the five piece orchestra struck up its first tune at 5 only one pair of guests was present to enjoy it — Miss Sallie-Anne Thomas and Pvt. Watson Parker. The first corsage sale was made to Mrs. Alfred C. Castle, who came from the symphony with her daughter, Mrs. Edmund J. Doering II., and who selected a confection of pink camellias, heather, and white carnations, entitled "Sweet and Lovely." Between sales the flower girls were busy admiring the stunning square-cut diamond engagement ring of Miss Shirley Hopkins, who will be married April 15 in Lake Forest to Ensign Walter Jennings Taylor.

When the guests did start to arrive they came in droves, and Mrs. Edward V. Platt, chairman of the benefit, happily watched the ticket sales mount at the door. Tea served at a long table covered with cream lace over shell pink was included in the price of admission while cocktails from the bar were extra, but both spots did a land office business.

Some of the others who voted the party a success were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woods, the Phelps Kelleys, the John Barclays, Philip B. Maher, J. C. Hemphill, Mrs. A. Loring Rowe, who had been elected president of the Dobbs Ferry alumnae earlier in the day; Mrs. Byron Harvey Sr., Mrs. Press Hodgkins, Mrs. Louis C. Sudler, Mrs. Paine Fentress, Mrs. William M. Collins Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams III., and Mrs. Freeman Hinckley and her daughter, Miss Eleanor McClure. A sable scarf was awarded as a prize to Mrs. John D. Ames.

Sophie Spring Collection Has Mark of Genius

BY REA SEEGER.

Every dress suit or coat in the new spring collection of Sophie originals is as good as signed by that genius, for Sophie originals illustrate exquisitely the imagination and subtlety of this topflight designer. Details are definitely and inimitably Sophie.

This spring you can tell her creations by the back placket or closing device which assures figure revealing fit, and creates interest in circular cut or back flares of the skirts.

Beautiful applique details always have distinguished Sophie originals. No one else can combine wicked black lace with dull textured black crepe to equal the luscious creations always found in her collections. This spring you'll see the most seductive of short black dinner and party dresses featuring this daring combination — in diaphragm sections, thru the bra half of the bodice, in short sleeves, and even in the skirts.

Silk shantung suits offer something special in color contrast. There's a jade green skirt teamed with a copper colored fitted jacket and a brick yellow short sleeved shirt. Then there's violet shantung imprinted with giddy green and cerise designs. Brand new accessories are gloves, hat, and bag, all of silk shantung as color drama with either suits or dresses of a vivid shade of shantung. A short, pink mauve wool coat worn with a navy blue dress, pale yellow column slim dinner dresses — to make a Delilah out of some coppertop; a slim-as-a-match deep purple dress topped with a raspberry red ostrich trimmed short jacket, and an elegant black silk bengaline coat combined with a draped black skirt and a frosty beaded sheer blouse, all in the Sophie collection, are unforgettable.

Suburbs Contribute More Than $50,000 in Polio Campaign

More than $50,000 is being contributed by suburban communities this year in the Cook county drive for $500,000 for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Britton I. Budd and Col. A. A. Sprague, co-chairmen, reported yesterday. Last year the suburbs contributed only $20,000, they said.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

You Don't Know Why.

You don't know why the oddest things prove comforting. For example, you feel much better about your housekeeping when you hear a friend describe a picture hanging askew in the Red room of the White House upon a recent interview there . . . and you don't mind half so much capering into the office unaware of an inch of slip showing when you learn that Mrs. R. revealed a bit of lace [ahem] on one of her trips to Chicago.

You don't know why you feel less absurd about your sundry quirks when you listen to an able advertising man admit he can't think up an idea without a soft pencil and a certain size pad of paper . . . or when you recall an eminent neurologist's confession that he is thrown for a loss if the patient sits in the doctor's chair in his office.

Or Why . . .

You don't understand why you are immeasurably cheered if a taxi driver remembers your name and looks pleased to see you again . . . or why the world takes on a rosy hue simply because your beloved [and not overly bright] dog leans confidently against your knee as much as to say, "We two—we make quite a pair, eh?" . . . or why a cup of hot coffee and a friendly nod from the waitress lifts spirits fallen low.

Maybe you can explain why the mere recollection of an old man buying phonograph records in a second hand shop—because he likes to dance the polka—suddenly makes life beguiling . . . or why any little kid on the street who looks up innocently sort of rips your heart—the world being the way it is . . . or why, after two years of war, you still cannot bear to watch the partings at the La Salle street station and the young, strained faces.

Sure, Tell Me Why.

You don't know why, when it's hard to laugh, the smallest things bring a smile—the observation, for instance, that thin women always weigh with their coats on and fat women with their coats off on the scales at the First National bank . . . or the discovery that not one Chicagoan in a thousand can tell you the difference between the lions on the Art institute steps—and try it on your friends . . . or why the sight of Joel McCrea, strolling along Michigan avenue in the sunshine, two youngsters by the hand [each in camel's hair coats] makes Hollywood less fantastic and almost homey . . . or why a copy of Dorothy Aldis' novel, "Time At Her Heels," leaning cozily against a profound textbook on the "Human Foot" on an orthopedic surgeon's bookshelf delights you.

Your Guess as Good as Mine.

No one knows why war changes people and jostles their sense of values . . . or why one woman, fatigued from a strenuous war job, sticks patriotically to her task when another woman, perhaps riding in the same bus, fritters away precious hours, and all the while the war man power commission at 308 North Michigan avenue is calling for women to work in radar-radio . . . and restaurant owners are begging housewives who can be spared a few hours from their homes to don fresh, clean aprons and see that our white collar girls get a substantial noontime meal in the crowded downtown cafeterias . . . no one knows why it is so hard to make clear that there is a place for each one of us and it's important, terribly important, to find it.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 4.—The long hairs now have a mad on at Cecil De Mille because he sang boogie woogie on the Sinatra show, but it was really an old nursery rhyme. But the bobby sox brigade swooned over him. To me it was a shrewd bit of showmanship on C. B.'s part, comparable to the time Leopold Stokowski appeared with his orchestra on Bing Crosby's show. . . . C. B. is all ready to cast the new prolog Dudley Nichols wrote for the reissue of "Sign of the Cross." The prolog takes place on one of our bombers over Rome, and shows our boys today are doing what Christian martyrs did in days of old. Picture has Charles Laughton as a dictator. This is the eighth time the Germans have tried to sack Rome. De Mille had a talk with Gen. Marshall while Marshall was here. The general thinks too few people know what Rome means to the world. "Sign of the Cross" at this time will be a revelation to many, because now we're flying over the same route the crusaders used.

How About It?

Humphrey Bogart returns next week. I'd like to start the ball rolling for him to star in "Mr. Broadway," Sime Silverman's life. . . .Even tho Joan Blondell and Mrs. Michael Todd attended opening of "Mexican Hayride" together, they didn't silence rumors flying about. . . . Constance Moore's record of Noel Coward's song "Don't Let's Be Beastly to the Germans" is getting her a big hand from all who hear it. . . . Laraine Day gets the lead in "Experiment Perilous" at RKO, plays opposite Paul Henreid in "Spanish Main," and Metro's promised her one big picture this year. . . . Mrs. Darryl Zanuck is giving Betty Grable a beeg baby shower tomorrow. . . . Connie Bennett's house for sale, and I understand at a bargain price.

Talk About Swooners.

You wouldn't think Joan Leslie, Joan Crawford, Ann Sheridan, and Alan Hale would be in that category. But they were when Comdr. Jack Bolton handed them autographed photographs of Adm. William Halsey which they'd asked for when he was here. . . . Carole Landis inviting friends for cocktails tomorrow. . . . Bette Davis and Dick Knox were seen dining together, then columnists coupled their names. From now on they'll dine in private. No, there's no romantic inference. . . . Bill Goetz didn't buy "Voice of the Turtle" altho he loved it. Thinks it would make a great picture. He went back east to catch Sonja Henie's ice show and pick out a couple of numbers for the picture which will be done in color. She's never been done in color. . . . When Barbara Stanwyck finishes "My Reputation" she'll take six months' layoff on the desert. I'll bet that desert will be near Livermore, Cal., and Lt. Robert Taylor.

He's Ready.

Soon as Bryan Foy got "Rip Goes to War" okayed in Washington, he was off to Mexico to try out his Spanish on the folks down there. He's been studying it for two years. . . . A friend of Merle Oberon saw her made up as George Sand in "At Night We Dream," and said, "Darling, you look exactly like Freddie Bartholomew!" Harry Cohn could have had Tallulah Bankhead for that, but that was before she did "Lifeboat." . . . Steve Hannagan's here again. Gosh! We can't keep him out. . . . Capt. Louis Hayward is quite ill in a private hospital here, which is using up all his furlough time. He'll report for another assignment in about two weeks. . . . Loretta Young's baby sister, Georgianna, modeling in New York, snared the understudy for Paula Lawrence in "One Touch of Venus."

This-a and That-a.

The home of President James Buchanan was opened for the first time in 50 years when our own Edgar Buchanan of the late President's family did a bond rally there. . . . Mrs. Lloyd Nolan is in New York with her husband for a week's fun before he starts "Coming In on a Wing and a Prayer." . . . Maj. Willis Wyler's latest for the air force is titled "25th Mission." It's in color, and a great picture. Let's hope you'll be able to see this in the theaters. . . . Even tho Mitch Leisen has nothing to do with "Bring on the Girls," he routined a dance sequence in it for Marjorie Reynolds and Billy Daniel. . . . I love the title of Walter Wanger's next, a story of the old west—"Salome Where She Dances." Wanger would give practically anything to borrow Hedy Lamarr for it, but getting Hedy from Metro is a tough job these days. . . . Gypsy Rose Lee is expected here soon. She's going from camp to camp trailing her trailer behind her.

Movie Comedy Good for Some Hearty Laughs

"NO TIME FOR LOVE."

A Paramount picture, starring Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray, directed by Mitchell Leisen, and presented at the Chicago theater.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

This is rough and tumble romantic farce comedy stuff that gets pretty thick at times but is so ingratiatingly played that willy nilly you enjoy yourself from start to finish of the preposterous action.

The heroine is a beauteous camera girl who takes pictures for a magazine and is engaged to the editor. NOT Mr. MacMurray, but Paul ["Tomorrow the World"] McGrath —and VERY nice. And then Sand Hog MacMurray comes into her life via an under-the-river assignment, where Mr. MacMurray is very bumptious and he-man and refuses to pose. . . . From here on the two hate and love each other wildly to the tune of much boisterous incident and dialog—and quite a lot of eating. I LOVE to see Miss Colbert eat! She does seem to enjoy it so!

Eventually Mr. MacMurray gets the girl. But you can't feel too sorry for Mr. McGrath. Claudette WOULD have led him such a life!

Nice bits are contributed by Ilka Chase as the heroine's very modern sister, Jerry D'Nuccio as a model whose manly beauty and physical prowess fairly have MacMurray biting his nails, and June Havoc, who provides temporary competition for Claudette in blonde, hard-boiled, facile fashion. The boys playing other sandhogs are all in the groove.

The picture abounds in laughs of the stomach variety, and Claudette is a beautiful sight to see. As are the clothes worn by herself and Ilka. M-m-m-m!

Concert Shows Harpsichord Has Old Charm

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

Legend has it that the young Johann Sebastian Bach journeyed 200 miles on foot to hear the elder master, Dietrich Buxtehude, play his own compositions. While in the light of history this may have been a slight excess of enthusiasm, it was well worth a trip to the south side last night to hear Philip Manuel, Milton Preves, and Franz Polesny play Buxtehude's Trio Sonata in A minor and other old but not dead music in a concert at Mandel hall by the Manuel and Williamson Harpsichord ensemble, for the benefit of the University of Chicago settlement.

Buxtehude loomed large before Bach, but not so large after him. The trio which the three musicians played so smoothly and expertly exuded a pleasantly archaic air—melodies fumbling toward expressiveness but not quite achieving it, contrapuntal lines spun out but with the ends never quite neatly tied.

Jumping ahead in history a few years, Messrs. Manuel and Williamson next placed on the music racks of their harpsichords a Sonata in B flat by Muzio Clementi, who began a notable career by writing music for the harpsichord and ended it as a renowned manufacturer of the harpsichord's successor, the pianoforte. It was his misfortune to write technical exercises which proved so useful that his serious work came to be quite overlooked. The two harpsichordists did not need to make a cause celebre out of this old music, for its vivacious charm, particularly the exquisite slow movement, argued capably in its own behalf.

The classical period has its neglected vocal as well as instrumental music, and Lillian Chookasian dug deep to discover an aria from "Theodora," one of the last of Handel's 32 oratorios. She sang it with superb breadth of style, and rare musicianship, in a contralto voice of noble depth and velvet smoothness. That this was no accident seemed to be indicated by the fact that the same qualities were revealed in Gluck's more familiar "O del mio dolce ardor." She is a newcomer to be watched.

A late start and an early deadline prevented our hearing any more of this delectable concert after Leon Temerson and Theodore Ratzer had added violin and cello to the violin and viola of Polesny and Prevés and joined with the duo-harpsichordists in a sparkling account of that astonishing masterpiece of early realism, Teleman's "Don Quixote" suite.

According to Culbertson

[Copyright: 1944: By Ely Culbertson.]

There are times when the holdup of an ace is unwise simply because the declarer has urgent need of the lower card as a means of exit. For example:

	NORTH
	♥ 8 5 4
	♦ J 7 4 3 2
	♣ 8
WEST		EAST
♠ K Q J 9 6		♠ 8 7
♥ 9 6 2		♥ 10 7 3
♦ 8 5		♦ Q 10 9
♣ K 9 5		♣ J 10 6 4 2
	SOUTH
	♦ A K 6
	♣ A Q 7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, of course, opens the spade king, and the fate of the contract rests on declarer's play at the first trick. The player who is just experienced enough to know about holdup plays, but who knows little or nothing about the reasons for making, or not making them would probably give West the first trick, with the vague idea that this was lessening the danger inherent in the spade suit. The inevitable spade continuation would remove the ace, and after that declarer could collect his top tricks but he would never bring home the fulfilling trick.

Declarer has eight sure tricks in his own hand. If he is lucky enough to drop the diamond queen, his worries will be over, but it is his duty, of course, to set up a plan that will not depend on better breaks than are to be expected. If the diamond queen does not drop, it will be impossible to enter dummy for the club finesse, and anyway, there is no assurance that the club king lies right. Thus, the soundest hope is to win the first trick so that declarer, after he cashes all his hearts and the two top diamonds, will have the spade ten left as an exit and throw-in card.

Obviously, this line of play works out perfectly. West collects four spade tricks, but then must lead up to South's major tenace in clubs. Even if West had started with six spades, he could not keep all of them and his guard for the club king.

Beef biscuit roll—Combine leftover ground pot roast [2 cups] with a little sauteed onion, 1 teaspoon horseradish, and enough gravy or white sauce to moisten. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Spread on rectangle of biscuit dough, roll up like a jelly roll, cut in slices, and bake in 400 degree F. oven about 25 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Simple Designs

BY NANCY CABOT.

Cross-stitch embroidery is a type of needlework that both young and old enjoy. The simple motifs may be used on curtains, luncheon sets, towels, and the like. The bright red cherries, combined with green leaves, give contrast so essential to attractive embroidery.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the cherries, No. 507, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th avenue, New York City.

Kitchen Pointers

By Mary Meade

How do you sour sweet milk in a hurry? That's what a reader wanted to know the other morning when she was in the midst of making gingerbread.

Sour sweet milk by adding a tablespoon of lemon juice or vinegar to the cup. Stir and use immediately. Or use sweet milk in the recipe, omitting soda and increasing the baking powder slightly. If the recipe calls for soda only, gauge the amount of baking powder to substitute by the amount of flour in the recipe. Use 1 teaspoon baking powder for each cup of flour for cake and sweet breads, 1½ teaspoons per cup of flour for muffins, and 2 teaspoons per cup of flour for quick biscuits.

Another reader wants to know whether using cake flour in pie crust will make the pastry more tender. The answer is no. Tenderness in pastry depends a great deal on the amount and kind of fat used. Lard seems to be the ideal pastry fat, and the proportion is ⅓ cup fat to each cup of flour. Pastry will not be tender if too much water is added in the blending, or if it is mixed and handled a great deal after the water is added.

If your goal is flaky pastry, do not use cake flour. Bread flour tends to produce greater flakiness. Cake flour is intended for cakes and for some delicate kinds of cookies.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

Tomato Peanut Soup.

2 cups canned tomatoes
2 cups boiling water
1 cup peanut butter
1½ teaspoons salt

Wedding News.

The marriage of Miss June Bandoli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin S. Bandoli of Lake Shore drive, to Ensign Roy Watson Jr. of the naval reserve will take place at 6 p. m. tomorrow in the Fourth Presbyterian church, with a reception following at the Lake Shore club. Miss Bandoli, a senior at Northwestern university, will continue her studies after Ensign Watson leaves on sea duty.

The date of the wedding, originally planned for Feb. 19, was advanced suddenly when Ensign Watson received his orders. He is the son of Mr. Watson of Rochester, Minn., and a graduate of Dartmouth college.

In the Church of St. Giles in Oak Park, Miss Mary Elizabeth Kerwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Kerwin of Oak Park, and Dr. Gregory James White will be married at 11 a. m. today, with a reception following at the 19th Century club. The bride was graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart and Rosary college. Dr. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph White of Oak Park, received degrees from Loyola university and its medical school and holds a reserve commission in the army. After a wedding trip he and his bride will be at home in Austin.

In the French room of the Georgian hotel in Evanston, Miss Dorothy Jean Wedekind, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. H. Wedekind of the Georgian, and Pvt. William F. Odell were married at 8:45 o'clock last night. Mr. Odell, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Odell of Red Hill, N. M., is stationed at Camp Gordon, Fla. His bride attended Tudor hall in Indianapolis, the Kentucky Home school for girls in Louisville, and Stephens college.

Engagement News.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Merring of Beverly Hills announce the engagement of their daughter, Lois, to Lt. Robert G. Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. George V. Adams, also of Beverly Hills. Miss Merring attended Morgan Park Junior college. Her fiancé studied at the Illinois Institute of Technology and the University of Illinois. The wedding is planned for early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Del Courtney of Youngstown, O., formerly of Hyde Park, announce the engagement of their daughter, Jacquelyn Jean, to Lt. [j. g.] William Michael Cunningham of the maritime service, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cunningham, also of Youngstown. Miss Courtney, a private first class in the women's reserve of the marine corps, attended Youngstown college and Ohio university. Her fiancé attended the University of Southern California. The wedding will take place soon.

Lt. Mary Daly.

The 9 o'clock post-broadcast program of the W-G-N Theater of the Air tonight in the Medinah Temple, Ohio and Rush streets, will be dedicated to the SPARS, women's reserve of the coast guard.

Following the presentation of Rudolph Friml's "The Firefly," approximately 2,000 prospective SPARS enlistees will remain in the auditorium, with other broadcast guests, to hear remarks by Ensign Donna Gill, attached to the SPARS recruiting office in Chicago, and Signalman 3d class Robert Guthrie of the coast guard, recently returned to the United States from a combat zone, who will be interviewed by Chief Specialist Olan Soulé of the coast guard temporary reserve.

Lt. [j. g.] Mary Kennedy Daly, senior SPARS recruiting officer for the Chicago district, also will be present, as will numerous other SPARS on her staff.

The program has been arranged by Chief Soulé under the direction of Lt. [j. g.] J. J. Kenny, coast guard public relations officer. Chief Specialist Marvin Mueller of the temporary reserve will be master of ceremonies.

An orchestra from Navy Pier, directed by Musician 2d class James Daly, will play, and there also will be professional entertainment.

The February meeting of the Navy Mothers' Club of Chicago will be held at 7:30 p. m. Monday in the Medinah club, 505 North Michigan avenue. The session will be both a tribute to Gold Star mothers of the organization and a memorial service for their sons.

Chaplain Hjalmer Hansen and the choir of the Great Lakes Naval Training station will be present at the ceremony, as will Dr. Frederick Shannon, formerly of Central church; Dr. Louis Binstock of Temple Sholom, and the Rev. Edward N. Coffey of St. Clement's church.

The club's canteen for service men, at headquarters, 335 North Michigan avenue, is open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., as well as Saturday and Sunday evenings. The organization also has made plans for "proxy" birthday parties each month, in honor of visiting sailors who have birthdays during the month.

The Navy Sisters and Wives' club, affiliated with the Navy Mothers, will meet at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday at headquarters to discuss plans for a dance which the auxiliary will give Feb. 19 at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Mrs. John Siebel will head a corps of women of the Germania club at noon today at Treasury center, 72 West Adams street, selling war bonds and stamps for the fourth war loan.

[This department reports on women's war activities and answers questions regarding such activities.]

Wise Working Mothers Put Children First

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

If you've been reading this column lately, you know it has been devoted to the subject of women who have children and must work to support them. That there are various problems to be solved and many difficulties encountered we have admitted.

But one day we did drop that thought and dwelt on the fact, brought out by a reader who wrote us, that a working mother and her children can have a happy and jolly life together—if only she will feel that way about it.

This mother pointed out one interesting and practical means of enjoying the time you do have with your children. It consists of "getting yourself a different set of values from the mother who is home all day. In formulating those new values, the most important thing is for a woman to make up her mind what is necessary and what is not."

It is, in fact, vital to your happiness and the children's to decide what you are going to expect of yourself and of them too, what you are going to consider important and what unimportant, if your life does not follow the usual pattern of wife and mother in a home maintained by the man of the family.

In the limited time you have with your children you can't be always fussing over non-essentials. The evenings, week-ends and holidays are all too short for you to have time for the children, unless you make up your mind that your association, your companionship with them come first. There are just so many hours of free time for you and the children to do things in together, so something has to go "by the board." It's important for you to make up your mind what that something is to be, to have a different set of values, as we said, from other mothers.

But all mothers need to do what some wise person has said, which is: "To know that the little things are little and the big things big."

Juvenile Togs

This one useful pattern makes both a coat and dress for the littlest fashion plate in the family. Heart motifs suitably afford the detail. Style No. 3704 is designed for size 6 months, 1, 2, and 3 years. Size 2 requires 1¼ yards of 35 inch fabric with 3 yards of edging for dress; 1 yard of 54 inch material for coat.

Order Clotilde patterns from Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, New York City. Print name and address; state size. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing. The pattern book is 15 cents, 10 cents if ordered with pattern.

Women of Bar Open Parley in Chicago Today

Miss Daphne Robert.

Delegates representing members of the National Association of Women Lawyers in the middle west will gather today for a regional conference to discuss postwar planning from the lawyer's point of view. The meeting, first of its kind, has been called by Miss Helen W. Munsert, north central regional director, and one of the guest speakers will be the national president of the association, Miss Daphne Robert of Atlanta, Ga.

Opening their conference to all lawyers, the women will center their meeting at the Chicago Bar association, 29 South La Salle street. Thruout the day there will be sectional meetings, with outstanding members of the legal profession and experts in other fields for the discussion of problems ranging from the reëstablishment in law practice of lawyers returning from military service to peace plans and international affairs.

The conference delegates and the Women's Bar Association of Illinois, at a joint dinner session tonight, will hear an address by Brooke Claxton on "International Aspects of Post-War Planning." Mr. Claxton is a member of the Canadian parliament and assistant to Prime Minister MacKenzie King. At noon tomorrow a closing breakfast meeting will be held in the Chicago room at the La Salle hotel for section reports and recommendations.

FORMER CONVICT SUES COURTNEY, AID FOR $3,500

Suit for $3,500 was filed in federal court yesterday against State's Atty. Thomas J. Courtney and one of his assistants, James V. Cunningham, on behalf of Charles R. Kennedy Jr., Detroit, Mich., who alleges that the men converted to their own use his personal property valued at the amount asked.

The suit, filed by Atty. C. A. Caplow, states that Kennedy was living at the Shelton hotel in New York when he was extradited to Chicago on an embezzlement charge, convicted, and sent to prison. His property in the hotel, the suit alleges, was turned over to the state's attorney's office and never returned to him. The suit says the property included a typewriter, luggage, and clothes.

Cunningham said last night that the typewriter was returned to "its rightful owner" and that he had no information about the other property. He asserted that the county had to pay Kennedy's $75 hotel bill when it extradited him.

Chicagoan, Once 'Missing Over Germany,' Returns

The war department yesterday notified Mr. and Mrs. Adam Sobolewski, 1723 North Monroe street, that their son, Sgt. Edward F. Sobolewski, who was reported missing in action over Germany Aug. 17, has returned to duty with the army air forces. Sobolewski, 29 years old, is a gunner on a Flying Fortress.

BEG YOUR PARDON

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—An Associated Press dispatch dated London, Jan. 13, reporting the release from internment of Nicholas Wolkov, said his daughter Anna was serving a 10 year prison sentence for violating the British official secrets act in a spy plot involving Tyler Kent, former code clerk in the United States embassy. It added that Kent received a seven year term.

The references to Kent contain an erroneous implication. He was not charged with espionage. After a secret trial in a British court the judge who sentenced him in November, 1940, announced that he was convicted of larceny of an embassy document which did not relate to actual military movements and of obtaining and communicating documents and materials which might be of value to the enemy and prejudicial to the interests of the state.

Kent still is serving the sentence. According to information received in this country he recently was moved to an old monastery on the Isle of Wight, where he was placed in charge of the camp library.

SCHOOLER TAKES STAND; DENIES GIRL'S CHARGES

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 4 [Special].—Harry Schooler, 25 years old, the "swing shift dance king," took the witness stand in his own defense today and flatly denied charges of seduction made against him by Patricia Frey, 17.

Schooler, married and the father of two children, has been on trial all week in Superior court on three counts of statutory morals offenses against the girl as the result of alleged improper relations with her on three occasions last August.

16 WIN PLACES IN CITY TITLE BOUTS FEB. 14

Face South Siders in Marigold Ring.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Sixteen youngsters last night stormed another objective in the campaign for amateur boxing's highest honors—Golden Gloves championships. While a capacity crowd turned Loyola gymnasium into a sounding board for long sustained cheering, eight open division fighters and eight novices battered their way thru sectional finals to earn recognition as the north side's champions.

The open division lads now will march on to Marigold Gardens where they meet the south section's title holders a week from Monday with city championships at stake. Already, however, they're looking beyond that goal and training their sights on the Tournament of Champions, which will bring the best amateur boxers of all Golden Gloves territory into the Stadium Feb. 28, 29, and March 1. One Chicago lad in each of the eight weight classes will represent this city in the big show.

Novices Near End of Efforts.

The boys who won novice titles last night already are near the end of their 1944 efforts. They will clash with the south siders on the Marigold program for city novice championships. Then they'll retire from Golden Gloves competition until next year, when they'll try to go all the way to the top in the open division.

Chris Fitzgerald of Loyola academy and John Nieweem of the Madison A. C. brought the crowd up cheering their magnificent performance in the welterweight novice final. After each had hit the other with every punch in the books without a letup, the decision went to Fitzgerald by a clear margin. Earlier in the evening the Loyola boy had whipped Eugene Kaiden of the C. Y. O. in a semi-final.

Jackie Boyd of the Madison A. C. was the first to hammer his way to an open division title. With both boxers beating a steady tatoo of punches, the flyweight final bout moved at a brilliant pace and at the finish, Boyd had a clear margin over Paul Iguchi of the C. Y. O.

Predict Evans Will Go Far.

Joe Evans, a colored lad from the coast guard, displayed exceptional natural talent in winning the 175 pound novice title. He showed an instinctive sense of ring generalship, he hit sharply and absorbed punches without being jarred a bit as he disposed of Arden Brazaitis in the first round of his final match.

The end came with emphatic suddenness. Brazaitis left his jaw open for just an instant—and that was all Evans needed. He lashed out with a right that stretched his foe so flat it wasn't necessary to complete a count. Tho Evans is a novice, he already has displayed such ability that many ringside observers predict he'll go far in Golden Gloves competition.

Louis Kick of the Libertyville Boys club, who is well known to north side Golden Glove fans, beat out a close decision over Gene Roberts of Fort Sheridan in the featherweight open final. Kick built up a fairly good margin in the earlier rounds, but was hard pressed to hold his advantage against Roberts' strong finish.

A Big Evening Ahead.

Last night's fighting supplied conclusive evidence that the city finals a week from Monday will be furiously contested. Previously the south side boxers had demonstrated that they could whip over punches as effectively as some of their distinguished predecessors of other Golden Gloves campaigns. But questions remained about the ability of the rivals they'd face for Chicago championships. Those questions were answered emphatically last night as big fellows and little fellows, soldiers, sailors, and club representatives flung themselves into Fitzgerald takes a drink of water as he awaits the evening's final test, his bout with John Nieweem, for the north side welterweight title. It was Chris' big night, for he won the championship by decision.

CAMP GRANT'S QUINTET BEATS NAVY PIER, 52-34

The Camp Grant basketball team gained its 19th victory in 21 games this season last night when it defeated Navy Pier, 52 to 34, in the pier gymnasium. The Warriors, who led thruout the contest, held a 26 to 16 margin at the end of the first half and used reserves freely. Frank Oftring of Navy Pier was the top scorer with 18 points and Mickey Rottner made 14 for the winners.

ROBERTS FIGHTS KICK AND TITLE HOPES EXPLODE

Soldier Glover Misses in Sixth Attempt.

FRANK MASTRO.

Of the boxers who almost became champions in the finals of the North section Golden Gloves tournament in Loyola university gymnasium last night none came closer than did Gene Roberts, Fort Sheridan featherweight, who was a bantamweight finalist in the Tournament of Champions in Chicago Stadium a year ago.

The 22 year old Roberts, who was making his sixth try for a diamond studded Golden Glove, met Louis Kick of the Libertyville Boys' club. Gene was the aggressor thruout the three rounds, but Kick, 19-year-old farmer outboxed him by a narrow margin and was awarded the decision.

He Meets De Simone.

Lou's father, Horace Sr., a Libertyville farmer, was a proud and happy parent as he accompanied his son from the ring. One of the first things young Kick did after returning home last night was to notify his brothers, Horace Jr. and Ralph, of his good fortune. Horace is a sailor at Great Lakes, while Ralph is a member of the navy seabees in the Aleutians.

Joe Evans Delivers.

Coast Guardsman Joe Evans was pegged as one of the finest prospects to enter the Golden Gloves competition. Joe, who is 19 years old and stationed at Grand avenue and the lake, captured the novice light heavyweight championship at Loyola and in doing so reminded onlookers of the Joe Louis who won the 175 pound Golden Gloves title in 1934.

Evans has been in the service 10 months and received his basic training at Manhattan Beach, N. Y. He had three bouts there under Lt. Comdr. Jack Dempsey and won all three. Joe started boxing as a member of the River Rouge [Mich.] High school team five years ago. During that period he engaged in seven matches without suffering a loss. The three victories he scored in the Loyola meet gives him a record of 13 straight triumphs.

REVOLTA SHOOTS 66 TO SET PACE IN PHOENIX OPEN

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 4 (AP).—Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., playing the greens superbly, carded a five under par 66 to take a two stroke lead today at the end of the first round of the 72 hole Phoenix open.

Two comparative newcomers in traveling pro ranks, Barney Clark, Denver, and Les Kennedy, Saylesville, R. I., were bracketed at 68.

The putting greens, which Revolta found to his liking, upset the pro's winter season leader, Harold [Jug] McSpaden of Philadelphia, who came in with a three over par 74.

Boilermakers Top Buckeye Five, 59 to 49

Columbus, O., Feb. 4 [Special].—Purdue university's basketball team kept its Western conference record clean tonight by defeating Ohio State 59 to 49. It was the Boilermakers' seventh consecutive Big Ten victory, and Northwestern's loss last night to Wisconsin leaves Purdue and Iowa tied for the conference lead.

The game was exceedingly rough and 38 fouls were called, 20 on Purdue and 18 on Ohio State. The Buckeyes led at half time, 24 to 21.

Four Players Foul Out.

Four players were forced from the game on fouls, three of Purdue's starters, Paul Hoffman and Steve Frazier, centers, and Paul Friend and Paul Huston, Ohio guard.

Capt. Don Grate, Ohio forward, was knocked unconscious midway in the second half and did not return.

Purdue's Dennis Horn shared scoring honors with Arnold Risen, Ohio center, each of whom scored 16 points. Hoffman was next with 14 points. Lineups:

MICHIGAN BEATS INDIANA

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4 [Special].—Michigan scored its second Big Ten basketball victory of the season tonight, beating Indiana, 65 to 49, for the Hoosiers' sixth straight conference loss. Tommy King, Wolverine forward who entered the game as the league's leading scorer with 109 points, made 16 more tonight.

Michigan grabbed a three point edge as the game opened on a field goal and foul shot by King and led all the way, holding a 32 to 21 margin at the half. King, however, yielded individual scoring honors for the night to his teammate, Elroy Hirsch, who poured in eight field goals and six free tosses for 22 points. Claude Retherford and Gene Faris led the Indiana attack with 14 points apiece.

Wolverines Take Early Lead.

The Wolverines built up a 22 to 9 lead within the first 10 minutes of the game and their lead never was threatened thereafter. It was the largest score ever made by a Michigan quintet against Indian and gave the Wolverines a conference record of two victories against seven defeats.

King, Hirsch, and Michigan's other starters were removed from play mid-way in the second half when Coach Benny Oosterbaan turned the gave over to a reserve five. Lineups:

MARINE BOXERS BUILD MAHOGANY RING IN PACIFIC

[By Staff Sgt. Saul M. Spiegel, Marine Corps Combat Correspondent.]

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC, Feb. 1 [Delayed].—What probably is the only solid mahogany ring in boxing history has been built by members of a marine unit here.

Mahogany two-by-fours, supported by empty gasoline drums, form the framework, atop which two inch solid mahogany planks have been laid. Six-by-six mahogany posts support the ropes.

The floor of the 16 foot square ring is overlaid with several inches of discarded and unserviceable clothing, pieces of tents, ponches, and shelter halves. This padding is covered by a tarpaulin.

BADGERS DEAL WILDCATS FIRST BIG TEN DEFEAT

Clash Requires Two Overtime Periods.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 4 [Special].—Wisconsin's basketball team knocked Northwestern out of a tie for the lead in the Big Ten race tonight, winning in two overtime periods, 50 to 47, before 2,200. It was the Wildcats' first conference defeat in seven contests and was the fifth victory in seven league games for the Badgers.

Altho Des Smith, Badger forward, was high scorer of the evening with 15 points, accumulated from seven field goals and one free throw, it was Russ Wendland, former Northwestern star, who tossed in the basket which gave the Badgers a 48 to 47 lead in the second overtime, which they enlarged with another field goal, a sleeper, Wendland passing half the length of the floor to Bill Johnson for the final points.

Wildcats Take Lead.

The game started slowly. Northwestern was ahead at all times during the first half that found the Wildcats with a 21 to 16 advantage. Jerry Carle hit three one handers from far out as Northwestern took the lead while the Badgers shot poorly and only the free throw accuracy of Ray Patterson and a trio of baskets by Smith kept them in the game.

The Badgers turned on the heat in the second half, employing a fast breaking game which ran the Wildcats ragged and went out in front, 33 to 31, with three minutes to play. Both teams went on a scoring rampage during those closing minutes with Carle tossing in a long shot with seconds to play to even the score at 39 all.

In the first overtime John Ward's basket and Ben Schadler's free put the Wildcats ahead, but Glen Seido made a basket and a free throw to even that period at 42 all. Lineups:

Wisconsin [50].	B	F	P	Northwestern [47].	B	F	P

TWO STADIUM GAMES

DePaul and Notre Dame, the basketball game Chicago's north side has waited a year to see, is the feature of the Stadium double header tonight. The opening contest at 8:15 o'clock matches Northwestern and Minnesota.

Altho this is only the second season of the rivalry between Notre Dame and DePaul, it is likely that the Blue Demons prefer a victory over the Irish to any other on their schedule. Tonight's competition is keener because the teams went separate ways until last season, each adding to the prestige of midwestern basketball without meeting in a test of respective merit.

Otto Due to Go

OFFICERS of the naval aviation program in Chicago yesterday confirmed that Otto Graham, Northwestern basketball captain and star football player, is included on a list of men from this area who will be ordered to report for training at pre-flight schools at De Pauw university, Greencastle, Ind., or Monmouth [Ill.] college on Feb. 17.

If Washington headquarters approve the transfer, Graham will play his last game against Illinois in Champaign next Friday.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Clarence Edinger, the northwest side bowler who chose the penultimate day of the 1943 Petersen bowling tournament to win the top prize in the valuable show, will make his attempt for the big money in the 1944 contest on the noon squad today. It was Clarence who chose the final Saturday of last year's party to fire that 1,710 which brought him first prize of $4,100.

In this afternoon's performance Edinger will find himself shooting at a fatter No. 1 prize check—$5,100 because of the huge entry list of 1,280 bowlers—and a smaller high score—the 1,622 which Leo Faetz of Chicago's Monarchs posted for first place last Tuesday evening.

Only Two 1,600s.

That total and the 1,611 which long Bill Flesch, Leo's captain on the Monarchs, also shot on Tuesday, are the only plus 1,600 marks on the scoreboard at the old Archer-35th lanes.

Frisky Hawks Play Tonight in Montreal

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Chicago Blackhawks, frisky in their possession of a five game winning streak, will play the league leading Montreal Canadiens in Montreal tonight. If the Hawks win the hockey match it will be the first loss in 18 home games for the Canadiens and it will be the first Chicago victory of the season over the Montrealers in either Montreal or Chicago.

The Hawks' one tie and the one contest in which the Chicagoans were blanked were in competition with the Canadiens. In four of the six matches the teams have played, the Canadiens have had a four goal margin. The leaders have won, 5-1, 6-2, and 5-1, in Montreal. In Chicago the scores have been 5-3, 4-0, and 1-1.

Bruins to Play Rangers.

The Hawks will go into the battle a game and a half ahead of the fifth place Boston Bruins, a team on which they recently gained 3½ games in a span of 10 nights to get into fourth place and potential Stanley Cup eligibility. Tonight their advantage over the Bruins may sag to a half game edge. This will come about if the Hawks lose in Montreal and the Bruins beat the tail end New York Rangers in Boston. In three earlier visits to Boston the Rangers have lost, 6-2, 9-6, and 7-5.

According to advices from Montreal, the Hawks are confident their lead over Boston will be a game and a half by midnight tomorrow night even if the margin is shaved to a half game tonight. Tomorrow night the Hawks will play the Rangers in New York and are confident of victory.

Return to Meet Bruins.

After tomorrow night's meeting with the Rangers Manager Paul Thompson and his boys will head for Chicago. They will play the Bruins in Chicago Stadium Thursday night, the Canadiens here Sunday night, Feb. 13, and the Toronto Maple Leafs here the following Sunday, Feb. 20.

Crown North Side Golden Gloves Kings

Large Evening Ahead.

Jimmy Sarenella, Henry Sparrow, Herb Mashino, and the other boys who will carry on for the south side are assured of a large evening when they take on the boys from the other side of town. These veterans improved their timing, hitting power, and ring generalship since their Golden Glove appearances of previous years—and they'll need all of that added ability.

Meanwhile, the campaign will be going forward at a brisk pace thruout Golden Gloves territory, which now includes a vaster area than ever before. It has expanded westward to take in the Pacific coast, with a tournament center in Los Angeles. It has bulged into the southeast with Pensacola coming into the battle and another new major southern center, New Orleans, is taking part for the first time this year.

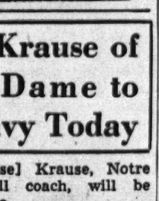
Moose Krause of Notre Dame to Join Navy Today

Edward [Moose] Krause, Notre Dame basketball coach, will be sworn into the navy as an ensign at noon today in the office of the naval officer procurement in the Board of Trade building, 141 West Jackson boulevard. It is expected Krause will be called to active duty about March 1.



Moose Krause.

Krause succeeded the late George Keogan as head coach of Notre Dame basketball last year and he also has been line coach of the Irish football squad for two seasons. A graduate of De La Salle High school in Chicago, where he played on a national championship basketball team, Krause starred in football and basketball at Notre Dame.

MOUNT CARMEL TOPS LEO, 33-31, FOR 17TH IN ROW

BY MARK COX.

For 28 minutes there was a typical Mount Carmel-Leo High school basketball game last night at the home of the Caravan, but in the final four minutes of the second quarter the superior height and finesse of the team directed by John Tracy was too great for the Lions and Mount Carmel won, 33 to 31. During this four minute span every member of the Mount Carmel five took part in a scoring outburst that produced 11 points before red-haired Jim Maline scored to break the spell for Leo just five seconds before the half.

17th Victory for Mt. Carmel.

When the teams took the floor at the start of the second half the same hustling driving Leo attack was back in force and kept the capacity crowd of 2,000 in suspense down thru Mount Carmel's successful stall during the final minute.

The victory, No. 17 this season for Chicago's only unconquered senior prep team, was the sixth straight for the Caravan in the south section of the Catholic League. It was Leo's first defeat of the Catholic league campaign.

Frank Lake Leads Scorers.

Ed Dawson of the Lions, who carried the Catholic league scoring lead of 78 points into the game, was limited to a pair of tip-in baskets and a single free throw by Capt. Ed Rose of the Caravan. Meanwhile high scoring prestige was going to Frank Lake of Mount Carmel with five baskets and two free throws for 12 points and Frank O'Grady of Leo with five field goals for 10.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

COOK COUNTY'S RAILS MAY GET TAX WINDFALL

Decision Could Shift Load Downstate.

An important decision which may result in the shift of several million dollars of taxes from utility and railroad companies in Cook county to other taxpayers is expected to be handed down by the Illinois Supreme court soon, it was learned yesterday.

The court has been asked to order the state department of revenue to assess railroads and the capital stock of utilities at 31 per cent of full value [for 1943 tax purposes], the factor used last year. By state law the department must make such assessments at the percentage average used by local assessors thruout the state.

Will Cause Change in Factor.

Assessor John S. Clark has just announced his assessment figures for Cook county at 100 per cent of full value, instead of the 37 per cent used in recent years, and this change has so weighted the state averages that it has been estimated the state department must change its equalization factor to about 60 per cent.

To make the arithmetic as simple as possible: If the assessment of rails and capital stock is at 31 per cent the amount to which the tax rates apply will be about 155 millions; if at 60 per cent, 300 millions and if at 100 per cent [this cannot happen this year] 500 millions.

Philip W. Collins, director of the state department, has estimated that if the court decides he may use 60 per cent, capital stock and rail interests will pay in Cook county 4 millions less than last year, but if he must stay at 31 per cent the corporations will save 8 million—their 1942 tax bills in the county aggregated 16 millions.

Raises Taxes Downstate.

Railroad properties downstate, however, will be taxed more, nearly double, and since they own more property downstate than in Cook county they stand to pay far more taxes to the other counties. The roads are insistent on the 31 per cent factor and are opposed by the attorney general, representing Collins, and Chicago taxing bodies. Pending a hearing on the mandamus proceeding an injunction restrains the state department from assessing at any factor except 31 per cent.

Clark's real estate and personal property assessments total about 6 billion dollars, compared to about 2 billion 400 millions last year, when the tax rate in Chicago was $10.42 per $100. With the higher assessment the tax rate should be below $4 this year.

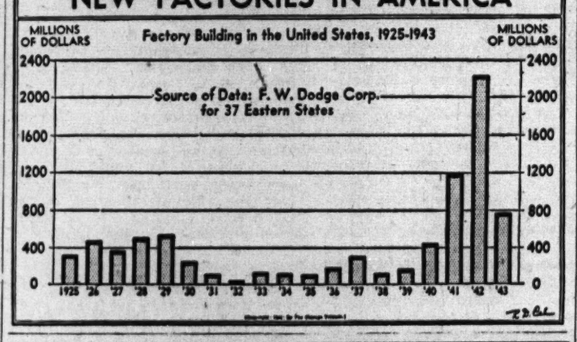
Budgets Are Drawn Up.

This assumes that taxing bodies stay within their old limits of taxation. The big ones in Chicago, except the Cook county government, have made up their budgets and observed the limits; they have denied any intention of raising taxes or selling more bonds under the lifted bonding ceiling, which is 5 per cent of assessed valuation.

It is expected that the county will demand more taxes than its pegged levy of 9½ million dollars; say 3 to 4 millions more.

Clark has said that he went to 100 per cent because that is the only fair and legal way to assess, and that all troubles growing out of his action can be done away with by having the rest of the state adopt the same system. The Illinois Chamber of Commerce is campaigning for a special session of the legislature to set new taxing limits on all governments that may raise taxes thru the change of assessment methods.

NEW FACTORIES IN AMERICA



Baking Firm's Earnings Rise to 2.2 Million

Net income of Purity Bakeries corporation and subsidiaries in the year ended Jan. 1 increased to $2,210,010, equal to $2.86 a share, from $1,714,538, or $2.22 a share, during the preceding 12 months, the company reported yesterday.

Lewis A. Cushman, president, said net sales of $53,631,634 were highest in the company's history and compared with $50,104,878 the preceding year. Federal income taxes were $3,035,576 after crediting a post-war refund of $181,115, compared with taxes of $2,124,158 a year earlier.

During the year the company spent $397,411 for the purchase of preferred stocks of Cushman's Sons, Inc., a subsidiary.

Shortage May Affect Output.

A shortage of wood pulp and waste paper may cause a slight temporary curtailment of Sutherland Paper company's production, L. W. Sutherland, chairman, and R. E. Rutledge, president, said in the company's report to stockholders for the year ended Dec. 31.

"We hope, however, to continue to run our plants at a high rate," they said. "Waste paper is still very scarce, but indications are that by spring this item should become more plentiful."

Its profit during 1943 was $820,506, equal to $2.86 a share, compared with $737,917, or $2.57 a share, in 1942. Net sales totaled $15,479,405, against $13,382,044. Provision for federal taxes last year, after deducting post-war credit, was $1,720,823.

66 PLANTS COULD HELP ON RADAR, SAYS SWPC AID

Sixty-six small electrical plants with 3,500 skilled employes have not been utilized by radar equipment producers in Chicago, and may go a long way toward overcoming the imminent worker shortage in the industry, Victor Fabian, Chicago district manager of the Smaller War Plants corporation, said yesterday.

Radar plants will need at least 7,000 new workers in the next three months, but prime contractors, of whom there are about 50, have not used the smaller plants fully thru subcontracting, he said. Some could be converted immediately and all could be in radar production within a few weeks, he asserted.

Charles M. Hofman, co-chairman of an industry committee to stimulate recruiting of women workers, said his group would investigate the possibility of using smaller plants for turning out parts and subassemblies.

STEEL COSTS SCANNED BY OPA TO DETERMINE NEED OF PRICE BOOST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—The OPA has opened the door to price increases for the steel industry, Chester Bowles, price administrator, disclosed tonight. He relaxed the long standing refusal of the agency to consider requests for higher steel prices based on more than a 55 per cent increase in labor costs since January, 1941.

He said that an exhaustive survey of the industry's operating costs is being conducted to determine whether any price increases would be justified.

Emphasizing that no general boost in steel prices is in sight, Bowles said that the mills will be granted increases if the study demonstrates that labor and other costs have risen to the point where profits have been cut below a fair level.

He said the survey and analysis cannot be completed before March. By that time, the war labor board is expected to have ruled on the CIO United Steelworkers' demand for a wage increase above that already permitted under the Little Steel formula.

Buyers Crowd Spring Mart; Top Old Peak

Chicago's annual spring market which opened this week was described yesterday by its sponsor, the Chicago Association of Commerce, as "in many lines the best attended market event held here in 20 years."

Reports from individual firms and from five of the merchandising shows indicate the number of retail store owners and buyers attending is larger than last spring, when approximately 16,000 buyers shopped in the Chicago market, the association said.

Increases in registration of more than 20 per cent were reported by three of the shows.

Sell on Allotment Basis.

With supplies in many lines inadequate to meet demand, most of the available merchandise has been sold on an allotment basis ranging from 75 to 100 per cent of the customer's purchases of a year ago. The association reported that dollar sales volume cannot be estimated because sales totals are limited only by the sellers' willingness to book additional orders.

Dress, coat, and suit houses and wash frock manufacturers booked business described as remarkable in volume, considering that a high percentage of the orders was classed as fill-in business. Many spring lines were opened last November. One wash frock maker reduced his original display of 50 models to three numbers, the only ones upon which his supply of piece goods permitted him to take additional orders.

Millinery Sales Set Record.

Record sales were reported by millinery houses this week, despite the fact that many buyers arrived last week in order to "get the jump" on competitors.

Two thousand wholesale and manufacturing firms participated in the market. Offerings included general merchandise, dry goods specialties, women's apparel, china, glassware and pottery, and 5 cents to $1 merchandise. For general lines the sales event closed yesterday, but the market for giftwares, china, and glass and pottery, will continue thru next week.

In buyer attendance, an exceptionally high percentage of syndicate store representation was reported. One buying organization was said to have had in the market 50 buyers representing stores with a combined purchasing power of more than 200 million dollars annually.

WPB Studying New Plan for Reconversion

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 [Special].—A reconversion plan under which companies reëntering civilian goods markets after completing war contracts would be limited to production of the amount of goods they sold in 1939 or 1940 is getting close study by the war production board.

In essence, the proposal would allot materials on applications of companies having facilities available for peace time production. Permission would be given applicants to go ahead with civilian goods production whenever material and labor were available.

Resumption of civilian goods output would be covered for at least two years by a quota system under which an applicant would be given sufficient materials to enable him to produce the same amount of a given product which he turned out in a base period.

Settles Timing Problem.

By using a quota system and a base period, it was held, the problem of timing the return to production of companies in a given industry would be met. A manufacturer of typewriters, for instance, who had 25 per cent of the typewriter market in the year before the war could go back into typewriter production, but for two years would be limited to meeting the same demand he met in peace time.

In this way, it was said, the typewriter manufacturer who has war contracts which will carry for some time beyond the time his competitor resumes civilian production can be assured that when he finally gets back into civilian output his share of the market will be available.

No Ban on New Makers.

According to information here today the plan does not include any prohibition against the entry of new manufacturers into a given field. Instead, it contains a proposal for earmarking a certain quantity of materials, enough to manufacture 5 to 10 per cent of the 1939 or 1940 sales of the industry, for the use of such producers.

In preparation for the time when cutbacks result in the closing down of factories capable of manufacturing civilian goods, the office of civilian requirements, it was learned, has already assembled figures on the 1939 and 1940 sales of a wide variety of consumer items.

STATE JOBLESS PAY LISTS DROP TO 3 PER CENT

Less than 3 per cent of the 3 million 400 thousand Illinois workers covered by state unemployment compensation drew jobless benefits in 1943, Francis B. Murphy, state director of labor, announced yesterday. It compares with approximately 10 per cent in 1942, he said, and with 9 and 17 per cent in the two preceding years. However, Murphy added, average weekly benefit checks have increased in response to rising wage levels from $12.92 in 1940 to $15.60 in 1943.

More than 25 per cent of the compensated workers were skilled workers, and approximately 25 per cent were semi-skilled, he said. About 20 per cent were professionally trained or had managerial experience.

BRITAIN'S LIVING COSTS REMAIN STABLE IN 1943

LONDON, Feb. 4 (AP).—Great Britain's cost of living remained stable last year. Wage boosts were given 6,200,000 workers. The number of working days lost thru strikes and work stoppages set a war time record. These facts were reported in a labor ministry summary issued today.

The cost of living index, the summary indicated, remained unchanged thruout the year at 99. At the start of the war it was 55.

The ministry announced there were 1,775 labor disputes involving 559,000 workers at a cost of 1,810,000 working days. During 1942 there were 1,303 stoppages which cost 1,530,000 lost days.

WHISKY STOCKS TUMBLE AS OPA HAUNTS BOARD

Ruling Sets Liquor 'Dividend' Price.

New York, Feb. 4 [Special].—Traders were alarmed today by the office of price administration ruling on base prices at which stockholders of American Distilling company may sell liquor which they are entitled to purchase from the company at cost, and transactions in American Distillery shares did not open on the stock exchange today until 11:10 a. m. The first sale of 2,500 shares was recorded at a 5 point loss.

After falling to 103¼, off 9½ from Thursday's close, the stock rallied to end at 105½, off 7⅞. "Stamped" shares, indicating the stockholder has deposited cash for the purchase of the first 16 of 18 cases allotted to him, were 2½ points lower at 47.

Park & Tilford Shares Lose.

Park & Tilford shares were 3⅝ lower at 71⅞. Recent strength had been due to official statements that this company also was considering a distribution of whisky inventories among stockholders.

Considering first the situation of stockholders who will not take whisky allotted to them, but who will receive a pro rata share of the proceeds of the sale of the liquor by the trustee appointed by the federal court at Chicago, the OPA ruled that the trustee may use ceiling prices of $18.62 a case for Rocking Chair and $25.68 a case for Guckenheimer which are provided for processors.

Profit Grosses $60 a Share.

As the stockholder is entitled to 16 cases of Rocking Chair at $242.72 [$15.17 a case] and to two cases of Guckenheimer at $46.50 [$23.25 a case], the trustee can sell all 18 cases for a gross profit of $60.06 a share, less certain charges that cannot be readily computed in advance.

In the case of the stockholder who proposes to accept the whisky, there are two alternatives. First, if he intends to retain it for his own use, he must reside in certain "fortunate states," such as New Jersey, where he can obtain a special license, but must also pay certain other charges.

Second, if he intends to resell the whisky, he may turn it over to a wholesaler only at the price he paid for it. Thus, he can make no profit, and possibly may sustain a loss after charges are met. He may, however, sell to a retailer under conditions which would give him a profit of 15 per cent.

May Obtain Profit of 11 Per Cent.

Most states prohibit a retailer from buying from persons who are not wholesalers or otherwise authorized to deal in liquor. In states where such sales are permitted, the stockholder is permitted by the OPA to make 15 per cent on the $289.22 which his 18 cases of whisky will cost him, or $43.38 a share. If he paid $110 for his stock, and pays $289.22 for the whisky, his return on the investment would be approximately 11 per cent.

The general stock market closed lower and transfers fell to 600,420 shares.

RAIL LOANS WEAK.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Tho trading in rail loans was generally heavy today and other sections of the bond market showed relatively little change, the Associated Press rail average dropped 0.3 to duplicate yesterday's decline. Selective buying in utilities boosted the market's average 0.3.

CHICAGO STOCKS LOSE.

Prices were lower yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Volume leaders included Chicago corporation and Commonwealth Edison, both down ⅛; and Miller & Hart, Asbestos Manufacturing, and Marshall Field & Co., all unchanged.

Food Subsidies Imperil Sane Price Fixing, Says La Follette

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—President Roosevelt's subsidy program to roll back food prices was blasted today by Sen. La Follette [Prog., Wis.] as a probable effort to "bamboozle" labor and save face.

In a statement issued while the senate prepared to consider the subsidy problem next week, La Follette said: "The whole effort to achieve a sane and workable stabilization policy will be jeopardized if the President and his advisers persist in attempting to hinge the entire wage and price stabilization program on the single issue of roll back subsidies."

Issues Are Misrepresented.

Asserting that the President's program will mean no more than 3 cents a day per person in keeping prices down, La Follette charged that the subsidy issues have been misrepresented.

"The advocates of the present food subsidy program and its proposed extension," he said, "attempt to present subsidies as the keystone of the stabilization program.

"Hysterical assertions have been made that the alternative to subsidies is uncontroled inflation. Extravagant claims as to the effects of these subsidies on food costs have been made which are not justified by the facts."

La Follette explained that congress intended a flexible control of price stabilization, recognizing that need would arise for adjusting prices and wages, but that Mr. Roosevelt did not choose to follow the policy set by congress.

"Perhaps," La Follette said, "partly to save face and partly from a desire to bamboozle labor into believing that the cost of living is stabilized and that the 'little steel' formula is therefore adequate to its needs, the President and his advisers have insisted on trying to meet these disparities by subsidy rather than by price adjustments."

Subsidy for Low Incomes.

The only sensible subsidy program, he said, would be one for low income families. The office of price administration is asking 1½ billion dollars for the program. For that amount, La Follette said, the government could give direct assistance to all families of less than $1,600 annual income, sufficient to maintain a diet of 80 per cent of the minimum diet standard of the department of agriculture. Three billion dollars used for the benefit of low income families, La Follette said, would enable 60 million Americans to enjoy the full standard minimum diet.

Large Gains Shown in Egg, Fowl Receipts

Poultry and egg receipts in midwestern markets showed large increases during the week ended Jan. 29, compared with the corresponding week of 1943, the war food administration reported yesterday. Egg receipts increased 16.69 per cent above the corresponding week of 1943 and 22.87 per cent above the preceding week. Poultry receipts increased 108.28 per cent above a year earlier and had a seasonal decrease of 12.96 per cent below the preceding week.

The large increase in poultry receipts, of which approximately 85 per cent was in fowl, was attributed to the culling of flocks by farmers. Despite this, egg receipts continued to gain and gave WFA the problem of supporting prices and finding outlets.

Pullets Aid Production.

The increased production was attributed to favorable weather and the fact that pullets are producing.

WFA officials in Chicago are attempting to devise means of increasing egg consumption. Coöperation of home economists and food editors is being solicited. The agency is caught between the farmers' demand for firmer egg markets and the effort to increase consumption without lowering consumer prices.

WFA last week announced support prices in 66 markets would be put into effect, the prices to reflect an average return to farmers of 30 cents a dozen for the calendar year. The average price at the farm in 1943 was estimated at 37.2 cents a dozen.

Seek Firm Market.

Announcement in January of the purchase of 15 million pounds of dried eggs for delivery in February at $1.16½ a pound was intended to firm the shell egg market. The dried egg price was to reflect a farm shell egg price of 97 per cent of parity, WFA officials said.

Rumors of changes in egg ceiling prices and the freezing of live poultry stocks for the army reported emanating from the eastern seaboard were denied in Chicago by office of price administration and army procurement officials.

HOG PRICES RISE AS PERMIT PLAN TRIMS RECEIPTS

Hog prices generally were higher yesterday at the Chicago stockyards when commission men reduced shipments to market under the shipping permit plan and packers made larger purchases. The average rose 5 cents to $13.35.

Receipts totaled 16,500, including 7,500 direct shipments to packers, compared with 18,367 Friday of last week, and 17,046 a year ago.

North Western Purchase of Engines Is Approved

Federal Judge John P. Barnes yesterday authorized the trustee of the Chicago and North Western railway to complete arrangements for the acquisition and financing of 39 diesel switching locomotives to cost $2,859,250. Purchase of all but nine of the engines had been authorized in previous court orders. Judge Barnes also authorized Claude A. Roth, new trustee of the road, to seek approval from the interstate commerce commission of the reorganization plan completed recently in the federal courts.

SEC AUTHORIZES ILLINOIS UTILITY STOCK PROGRAM

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4 [Special].—The securities and exchange commission today approved a proposal by the Consolidated Electric and Gas company to sell thru competitive bidding 400,000 shares of $15 par value common stock to be acquired from Central Illinois Electric and Gas company. Proceeds will be used to satisfy the 5½ per cent first lien collateral trust bonds, due in 1957, of Federated Utilities, Inc., which were assumed by Consolidated.

Preliminary to the sale, Central Illinois will reclassify its 72,242 $15 par shares of common stock into the 400,000 shares and Consolidated will surrender the shares it holds in exchange for the reclassified shares.

The proposed divestment by Consolidated of Central Illinois is in line with its announced program of ridding itself of its subsidiaries under the holding company act.

CURB REPORTS PROFIT; FIRST FOR SIX YEARS

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The New York Curb exchange earned money last year for the first time since 1937. The Curb reported today, in a consolidated income statement, that the exchange had added $121,855 to surplus compared with a net loss of $105,002 in 1942. Most of the junior market's income sources improved over 1942. An exception was dues, which were down slightly.

GRAIN CEILINGS ARE SET AT OLD 'FREEZE' LEVEL

Rollback in Prices to Come Later.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4 (AP).—The office of price administration today established maximum prices for oats, barley, and grain sorghums at the same levels set by the temporary "freeze" order of Dec. 6. The temporary order, which expired today, fixed oats and barley ceilings at the highest prices in major markets, during the period from Nov. 29 to Dec. 3, 1943.

OPA, taking action under a directive from Fred M. Vinson, director of economic stabilization, said it recognized that prices established for oats and barley are above parity. They will be reduced to reflect parity as soon as possible, the agency said.

Retain Temporary Levels.

"It is believed," OPA said, "that at this season of the crop year it is advisable to permit the temporary price levels to remain in effect, in order that the revised permanent regulations may be as complete and accurate as possible."

The temporary sorghum grain ceilings were established at prices approximating parity at the following basic points: $2.36 a hundred weight at Kansas City, Mo.; $2.40 a hundred weight at Texas common points, and $2.74 at Los Angeles and San Francisco, Cal.

William McArthur, head of the Commodity Credit corporation grain division, said that altho heavy inroads are being made into the nation's wheat, the country will manage to avoid rationing flour and bread.

"With careful planning, we will have ample supplies," he added.

OATS SHOW STRENGTH.

Announcement of permanent ceilings on cash oats, barley, and grain sorghums failed to affect trading yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. May oats showed moderate strength with some buying attributed to cash interests and closing trades were ⅛ to ⅜ cent a bushel higher. Barley futures were dull and finished ¼ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ⅓ cent lower and rye was ⅝ to ⅞ cent lower. Trading in rye was fairly active within a range of 1¼ cents. Commission house selling caused a rapid decline at one time. Altho professional traders supported the market on the break, the finish was near the bottom.

TAP CANADA'S SURPLUS.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP).—Reporting the government's plans to import wheat from Canada by rail this year, representatives of federal agencies said today it is more practical to tap Canada's exportable surplus than those of Argentina and Australia.

"No one knows how much grain will be moved down the lakes," Mark Upson, director of the war food administration's transportation division, told a meeting of the lower lakes grain committee. "The bottleneck in 1944 lies in the amount of grain Canada can move to the lake heads."

He said that 2,700 freight cars of United States railroads have been sent to Canada to bring in wheat, mainly thru the Duluth gateway, and added "we are trying to get every bushel of wheat we can from Canada."

Alcoa Changes Quarterly Dividend to 50 Cent Rate

A change in dividend payments was announced yesterday by the Aluminum Company of America when directors declared a 50 cent distribution on the common stock. Gordon W. Cameron, treasurer, said the company henceforth will pay equal quarterly dividends of 50 cents a share, whereas, prior to the recent 3 for 1 split up of common stock, the company had been paying $1 a share in each of the first three-quarters and $3 in the fourth quarter.
